Look to Future, Queen Urges

American Dollar Reeling

LONDON—(AP)—Currency speculators sent the United States dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only heavy buying by the Bank of England kept the rate just off the mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The jump was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the undervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's central bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $120 million in the last hour Monday.

WANT MARK SET FREE

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark now pegged at 27 cents — to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up, too.

The British pound was caught in the squeeze but to a lesser extent. However, the Bank of England is reputed to have taken in more than $1 billion since December, driving the country's rate of inflation up to the highest level of any country, in Western Europe, 8½ per cent.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government raised the value of the mark 8.5 per cent to end the 1969 crisis. But so far officials of the central bank of Frankfurt deny that it is likely to be revalued upward or allowed to float free in the near future.

. . . Songs, Cheers and 21 BLAMs!

A royal arrival is an emotional blast — charged by anticipation, made to tingle by the deluge of color, sound and masses of people.

It was that way on the huge green spread of the Legislature lawn this morning.

First the anticipation.

Youngsters massed on the Legislature steps, packed in like bees, armed with tiny pennants, backed by the glittering brass horns of their band. Bursts of cheering for everything, for nothing.

HONOR GUARD

And just across the way, the spartan black hull and white superstructure of Britannia, her Royal Standard, the Union Jack, the Maple Leaf along her only string of color.

The bands blast while everyone strolls and waits. Kids wrestling on the lawn, running, hollering, climbing statues and trees, being ordered down again.

All sorts of outfits — sports shirts and tweeds, pant suits and fur collars, jeans and long hair.

FIRST ROUND

And then — BLAM — the first shattering round in the royal salute. It echoes across the Inner Harbor, bounces off the Empress and swings back to the Legislature.

And down the distant gangway of the royal yacht a tiny slim figure in pale lemon coat, cream bonnet leads the way.

The striking impression of the Queen as she passes slowly by on Belleville in her limousine — is youth. She looks so startingly young. She smiles and there is the regal wave. Polite applause rides down the lines of the crowd. Kids are hoisted on their dad's shoulders.

It is the young people on the Legislature steps who cut loose when she arrives. The pennants wave frantically and all those thin voices swell together to drown out everything else.

There is God Save the Queen, but with something more in it. And surprise, there is an upbeat of folk song, solo and chorus, about British Columbia. It's a bragging song, but on that lawn, with the sunshine, color and crowd, a gentle warm breeze, it's not all that boastful.

In quiet cultured tones she responds, in English and French. She speaks of her "admiration and affection for this glorious part of Canada."

And, she says, "You have made us very welcome."

Then there is the ritual signing of some black ledger and the Queen moves off the platform and pauses with Prince Philip to chat with the children.

Slowly they move toward Heritage Court and the museum.

The prince had stopped to look at totem poles carved by B.C. Indians to represent the provinces of Canada when he pointed at one of the poles and said something that broke three of the cameramen into laughter.

During the walk the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne stopped to talk with carver Henry Hunt and his wife and chief James Sewid, the centennial chairman for Indian participation from Alert Bay.

"She said it's beautiful, it's impressive," Sewid said when asked what the Queen had said to him.

The royal party accompanied by Premier and Mrs. Bennett visited the Provincial Museum for five minutes as they walked through Heritage Court.

People jammed both sides of the route the Queen walked from the front entrance of the provincial legislature across Government, down a narrow passageway beside the new Provincial Archives building and into the spacious courtyard between the archives building and the museum.

Three members of the royal party stopped frequently to talk with members of the crowd and the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs who lined the front of the crowd.

"I was thrilled," said Mrs. Clair McCaul of her brief chat with Queen Elizabeth.

"She asked me which group I was with and I told her the Royal Canadian Air Force. I then told her I portrayed Queen Victoria in the 24th of May parade, and she replied 'I know.'"

Mrs. McCaul said she "felt quite at ease" talking to the Queen, who she met briefly at a Buckingham Palace garden party years ago in England.

"I'm so proud to think she picked me to speak to," she said.

ENJOYS OUTING

A stiff breeze lent a sudden flair of color and pomp to the royal outing as it set banners and flags snapping and waving above the Heritage Court crowd.

RCMP security officers had no trouble with the crowd save for the odd youngster too short to be held by the restraining rope.

The only incident occurred when a mustachioed, bemedalled security man in a green uniform chased several small boys out of a tree overlooking the Queen's route.

JOBLESS PAY FOR ALL MPs?

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs are considering a proposal that could make voters less squeamish about turning them out of office at the next election.

The Commons labor committee today dealt with the question of whether members should contribute to the unemployment insurance fund, which would make those who didn't have another job or couldn't find one eligible for benefits of $100 a week following an electoral ejection.

The committee is studying Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's bill to expand unemployment insurance coverage and to increase benefits.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said he really didn't think MPs would include themselves within the plan because they wanted to be assured of benefits.

Rather, they should not allow themselves to be exempt from paying unemployment insurance premium payments when they were pressing for the more universal scheme proposed by the bill, which brings in relatively secure people who did not especially want coverage.

Happy Crowd Greets Royalty

Queen Elizabeth told British Columbians today they must look ahead and show concern for "the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these spendid natural surroundings."

The Queen's plea with an unmistakable environmental tone came at the conclusion of her 500-world reply to the official welcome address from Premier Bennett on the legislative grounds today.

Bennett followed up with an announcement that the province has established, with the Queen's consent, a Queen Elizabeth the Second Scholarship.

It will provide $5,000 for a graduate of a B.C. university each year, for study in the United Kingdom.

The Queen's bilingual address — she spoke a few words in French about Canada's dual culture — recalled that she had first visited "this glorious part of Canada" 20 years ago.

She said it seemed "hardly possible" that so much had been achieved in those years, and she referred to "the tall buildings, the wide roads, the comfortable homes, the universities and the thriving industries."

She spoke of the need for co-operation and tolerance in the achievement of progress and the development of a "humane civilization."

Said the Queen in conclusion:

"I think you can all look back with satisfaction and with gratitude to your predecessors who laid the foundations so well.

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

Premier Bennett extended the official provincial welcome to the Royal Family and welcomed "the opportunity it affords us to express directly to Your Majesty our deep and admiring loyalty."

★ ★ ★

Along with the inspection of an honor guard and a 21-gun salute, the brief speeches were just about the only formal parts of a warm welcome for the Royal Family by thousands of people.

A 1,000-voice choir serenaded the Royal Family with enthusiastic cheers and later with songs during the first half of today's events in front of the legislative buildings.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne all appeared in cheerful spirits and continually stopped to chat with bystanders as they strolled from the legislative grounds to Heritage Court across Government Street.

The excitement began to build at 10 a.m. when the first of the 21 cannon blasts rang out, startling the large crowd.

★ ★ ★

The Queen, wearing a dress and coat of maize yellow wool gabardine, moved smartly off to inspect the guard of honor, pausing once or twice to chat with a member of the guard.

The band played God Save the Queen followed by the massed choir, made up of students from the Greater Victoria school system, singing O Canada.

Princess Anne, wearing a dress and jacket described as "stone-colored nattier worsted," stopped to chat with young Valerie Lowther, of 2023 Townley, who was in a wheelchair on the driveway of the legislative buildings.

The princess asked about the activities at the George Pearkes Clinic, said Valerie's mother.

Rich Margison of Claremont Secondary School sang the verses to a song he wrote with classmate Greg Davidson, called "For This Is British Columbia."

The locally-written song, which seemed to please the Queen, was given precedence over the official centennial song written by Bobby Gimby and called "Go British Columbia." That song was sung as the Royal party moved off toward Heritage Court.

Spectators lined the short route from the Royal Yacht Britannia to the legislative buildings to get a close glimpse of the Royal Family, who arrived in an open car. The route was along Belleville and Government streets and the legislature driveway.

Brilliant Start for Royal Visit

The magic of a royal visit brought smiles to even the most cynical of faces Monday night as thousands of Victorians and visitors welcomed the Queen to town in perfect summer weather.

Everybody was happy as Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, Princess Anne, Governor-General and Mrs. Michener and the newlywed Trudeaus turned a normally quiet weeknight into pandemonium downtown.

There were no untoward incidents, as tour organizers like to say instead of trouble.

Disappointment was expressed by some that the crowds were not bigger. Estimates of the throngs at dockside, along the parade route and at Centennial Square varied widely, from Premier Bennett's enthusiatic 150,000 on down.

But what they may have lacked in numbers, the thousands made up in ardor, and at one point in the city hall ceremony came close to mobbing the royal party in their efforts to get closer.

Yacht Arrives

Almost as if they were waiting for something to cheer about, the crowd in the dock area shouted and waved as Britannia's flags were hoisted aloft when the yacht docked at 6.45 p.m.

Estimates of the dockside throng varied. An RCMP officer said 4,000, a city police officer said 5,000, a television reporter estimated there were 10,000 in the harbor area.

Well-barricaded behind wooden fences and orderly police lines, the crowd cheered again as the crew of the Britannia slow-marched to three decks and stood at attention facing the shore.

On the upper third deck of the yacht, 17 Royal Marines in topi helmets, and on the middle deck 42 ship's officers gazed out at flag-waving children and camera-toting tourists as interestedly as the crowd looked up at them.

First Sight

Amidst Royal Navy ensign and the Union Jack, the Maple Leaf flew in a weak breeze from the second last mast.

For Canadians accustomed to the roar of hockey arenas or football stands, the applause which greeted the royal party's appearance on the gangway was quiet, restrained.

The Queen walked directly to the waiting car. Prince Philip talked briefly with a small boy squatting near the barricade: "You're shooting directly into the sun. You should be on the other site."

The Trudeaus also moved quickly to the line of autos, and were applauded as loudly as the royal party. Governor-General and Mrs. Michener left the yacht three minutes later to quiet applause.

'Serves Purpose'

Observed J. Maurice Langelier, a Montreal businessman who retired here two years ago: "The monarchy is all right. It serves its purpose." Langelier said he had grown up in Trudeau's neighborhood and had gone to school with the prime minister at St. Jean Brebeuf College.

"So far, so good," one RCMP constable said to another. "It's quieter than I would have expected."

Thousands lining streets in the harbor area greeted the royal visitors with polite applause as they drove by, but gave the Trudeaus, two cars behind, a lively cheer.

But the spirited response of those lining Belleville in front of the Legislative Buildings was saved for the prime minister and his wife, Margaret, as they went past, sitting.

The cavalcade was pursued by a youth on a unicycle and a pair riding 10-speed bicycles.

Grounded

Street Packed

By 7 p.m., Yates Street, which had been set aside for children, was littered with them. Many squatted in front of the curb. Some climbed trees, others sat on the hoods of cars and a few perched on top of ladders.

Behind the children, assorted parents adjusted the f-stops of their cameras, twisted the focus dials of their binoculars or fiddled with the sound on transistor radios.

From the corner of Cook and Yates and down to Blanshard, the crowd stood five deep. Cook was blocked on the north side of Yates as well as on the south side of Fort.

Trudeaus Smile

"That wasn't much," said one youngster after the cavalcade rolled briskly past.

The Trudeaus, smiling from a silver sports car, brought a rush of excitement from a covey of ladies. One woman rippled her friends with nervous laughter when she said:

"I saw the queen, but I didn't see Philip."

One boy, wearing an American flag as a shirt, said he had no interest in seeing the Queen, and had come only because his parents had told him to.

Why was he wearing an American flag?

"Because I'm an American."

Children generally were enthusiastic about their feelings. One girl said she hoped Trudeau wouldn't be there because she didn't like him any more after his marriage to a woman who is "too young."

Bicycle Escort

The last limousine, crowded with Mounties in scarlet, had an escort of its own as it scudded along Cook Street behind the Queen.

The long-haired youths on 10-speed bicycles, pedalled along gleefully in the wake of the RCMP escorts, flashed the peace sign. The thin crowd muttered dourly. The mounties in the car ahead grinned.

The crowd began gathering in force along Cook between Fort and Yates just a few minutes before the Queen's cavalcade arrived. Even then it was a pretty thin crowd.

People stood about two deep along the curb, with ragged gaps appearing frequently. They were predominantly older couples with young children in tow. There were few teen-agers or young adults.

Applause Light

Although the crowd surged forward into the gutters as the Queen's cavalcade drew near, applause was generally light. Most spectators headed right back to their cars as soon as she had passed.

Two flags appeared in the stretch from Fort to Yates, both of them maple leaf designs brandished by young children. One was a paper paste-up that looked like an elementary school project.

The crowd got a show before the Queen arrived as irreverent youths gunned their chopped motorcycles and muscle cars up and down the street.

A pick-up truck cruised from Fort to Yates and back again with a teen-age boy lounging in the back and lazily waving a parody of an official wave.

One long-hair, in sunglasses who sauntered by at the back of the crowd as the queen passed observed: "Go away, man. The Queen is a bum trip."

But an eight-year-old girl thought otherwise. "She serves the country. She's the Queen of British Columbia."

An elderly man with a British accent thought the visit was "just splended," but he grumbled about what he considered a poor turnout.

In Centennial Square, Jack Clerkson, 21, thought the display was "charismatic." Scott Munro, 19, commented that the Queen had brought "the best turn-out of girls all year."

Only a few hundred people were scattered along Fort between Blanshard and Vancouver. A young mother was breast-feeding her baby in her car, waiting for the royal cavalcade.

Streets Closed

At the corner of Fort and Cook a crowd of about 600 closed off the two streets, and parted only reluctantly to let the occasional car or motorcycle through.

As the cavalcade drew near some people began to clap, others waved. An elderly man shouted "Welcome, welcome, welcome," to the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

"Get down, you bums," shouted an angry lady.

Shoving and pushing to see the Queen annoyed some spectators. "Some fool of a photographer had to stand in front of me just as the Queen went by, and all I saw was the back of the fool's head," said one woman.

'Fishing's Good'

The Prince waved back.

An older woman in a wheel chair, after catching a glimpse of the Queen, said:

"Well, I guess I've seen them all. "I saw Queen Victoria when I was 7, then Edward . . . he was some lad. I saw George V and VI and now the Queen. A lot of history has gone by."

Trudeau received some cheers and handclaps, but also this: "It will do him some good not to be in the limelight. It might help deflate his ego."

"We need a Queen just to show the politician that there is someone else on top," said another.

Royal Luggage

Minutes after the royal cavalcade pulled away, three DND trucks pulled up and began disgorging the royal baggage, more than 100 pieces of it.

The stuff was whisked aboard in trunks, boxes, suitcases and crates under the direction of Lieut. Victor Hays, 20 men from the 2nd Escort Squadron, three RCMP security officers and three drivers.

Then the royal party and entourage returned.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his bride walked aboard the Britannia to say goodnight to the Queen, whose smile was just beginning to fade as she stepped back on the gangplank.

"Home," said Trudeau.

Premier Bennett, loodking more robust than usual, was asked for impressions of the royal visit's first day.

"Beyond everyone's expectations," the premier enthused. "There were 300,000 people out in Vancouver, and 150,000 — half as many here in Victoria."

Asked whether he had personally arranged for today's excellent weather and tomorrow's forecast of the same, the premier said he had not. And in reply to a query about the lack of demonstrative anti-monarchists, Bennett said: "There's no such thing."

She's Arrived! And Formality Gives Way to Smiles

The air of formality that had been building up around city hall began to disappear as soon as Queen Elizabeth strolled into Centennial Square.

At 7.23 p.m., someone in the crowd noted the royal standard had just risen atop the clock tower on city hall, and a little girl's voice cried: "She's arrived."

Appearing relaxed and smiling next to beaming Mayor Courtney Haddock, the Queen was in no hurry to make her way to the platform. Ripples and bursts of cheers and applause broke out as she chatted at length to aldermen and others on the way.

The casual and unhurried attitude reached a peak at the end of her visit to the Square. Police cordons collapsed in several places, and the crowds pressed in on all sides of the cavalcade of cars, offering many people a view that looked almost too close for safety.

Prince Philip no sooner caught sight of a small group of war veterans than he marched directly over and asked: "Who are you?"

EACH CELEBRITY

Straining to see from behind behind yellow cordoning ropes, the few thousand people who crowded into Centennial Square registered the appearance of each new celebrity with clapping, cheering and oohing, depending o the personality.

While the Queen, Phnce Philip and Princess Anne drew cheers and clapping as they came into the view of each group, Prime Minister Trudeau and his young bride brought on a long low "ooh."

Premier Bennett, who was making almost no effort to make his presence felt, managed a few characteristic waves and received hearty cheers in return.

Bennett, Trudeau and others waited a long time standing before their chairs on the platform before the Queen finished her conversations and arrived there.

STALWART VOICES

A shortened version of God Save the Queen and O Canada left some stalwart voices singing the Queen right through, ending several seconds after the cadet band had come to a stop.

An eerie background sound of symbols and religious chanting from the Hare Krishna following was clearly audible at centre square throughout the anthems, and during most of the visit.

People had begun to find viewing spots on the square as early as 3 p.m. along the cordons.

Many got a very close view of the royal family, but almost all the chatting was with the scouts, cadets, veterans and other organized groups on the other side of the ropes.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne all shook hands with Mrs. Elva McDonald, soon to celebrate her 104 birthday. The Queen told her she was happy to see Mrs. McDonald looked so well.

Princess Anne said: "Congratulations on your birthday from all of us." Mrs. McDonald was so excited she could hardly get the words out: "I am so pleased to meet your Majesty."

Chuckles greeted Prince Philip's quip when recognizing Mrs. Arthur Laundy's IODE pin: he asked, "Here are the Daughters where are the fathers?"

Mayor Courtney Haddock was so overwhelmed with the gift presented to him, by the Queen he promised to find a place for it in the city's archives.

From the city of Victoria the Queen received an oil painting of Vancouver Island's Mount Victoria and a parchment scroll recording the dedication of a piece of waterfront property on which a mooring ring still exists from the windjammer days.

In the depths of the crowd, almost unnoticed, the Victoria Low Income Group served paper cups filled with wieners and beans.

A large sign appeared over the heads of one section of people saying: "Alberni Valley, 1,200 on welfare. 1,600 unemployed. Where's the good life?"

The casual approach of the royal family was best visible when they signed the city register. After Philip had recorded his name he turned to hand the pen to Princess Anne. She was in conversation with Ald. Robert Baird, and her father had to gesticulate with a full swing of his arm to get her attention. This drew applause from the crowds.

The only frantic activity came near the end of the 45-minute stay at Centennial Square, about 30 photographers and members of the press who were allowed to stray from their designated area, found themselves jammed in a corridor between rows of police and red-coated Highlanders.

They began to block the view of people whose only chance for a close view of the royal party was about to take place. They were booed and told to "get out of there" until they had backed into the street and around the Queen's limousine which was closely surrounded by more people.

He Might Just Wait . . . For a Second Look

It is 30 minutes before the Queen was due to arrive at City Hall.

His name is George East and "if I make the next several weeks I'll be 79."

Will he wait?

"I might, just to see how she's aging. On the other hand, I might just catch the bus back home."

He keeps up a pretence of nonchalance, undermined by the newspaper clippings he brings out from his pocket — all on the royal visit. With pride he shows his centennial pioneer medal.

Still he lingers. He reminisces, remembering the times he's seen the Queen's parents and grandparents.

Back in history again, "Did you know that I was baptized by Lester Pearson's father — he was a Methodist minister."

Why are they there?

* * *

Dave Weigand is blunt: "We're just curious. We want to see what the British are spending a million pounds a year on."

Cathie Duncan agrees: "We've seen her picture on the school wall — we salute the flag — we want to see what it's all about."

Stan Denniston gives his views: "The monarchy is a holdover — you know — from the old feudal times. It doesn't mean a thing. It doesn't make us any more Canadian."

Lin Biggs pauses a moment, then says, "I guess she's a symbol — or something."

The police escorts drive by. The students stop talking. In spite of their words their eyes, like everyone else's, are on the royal car.

The old man, too, has stayed.

After they've passed, he comes over, grabs an arm.

BESIDE BRITANNIA are Governor-General and Mrs. Roland Michener who came across on boad the yacht from Vancouver with the royal party.

Old School Friends Meet

Maurice Langelier, formerly of Montreal, walked from his home at 10 Douglas Street to the CPR docks to see the Queen, and hopefully to shake hands with his old school friend, Pierre Trudeau.

The two-hour wait was worth it.

He not only shook hands but had a brief chat with the prime minister as Trudeau and his wife followed the Royal party back to the Britannia.

SAME SCHOOL

Langelier, whose family lived four houses away from the Trudeaus, went to the same kindergarten as Trudeau. The boys went through school together at Le College Jean de Brebeuf in Outremont.

Langelier remembers Trudeau as "very sporty, very intellectual, quiet but well respected." He played hockey and lacrosse.

In the conversation at the dock the Prime Minister asked Langelier how long he had been living here (a year and a half) and said "I haven't seen you since college."

As a Canadian from Quebec Langelier believes that the monarchy should be kept as a symbol, even though the Queen has nothing to do with the administration of the country.

POOR FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO PRESENT BEAN PLATE

The Queen didn't even get a sniff of wieners and beans Monday night as the poor peoples' banquet took place on schedule during her visit to Centennial Square.

The demonstration, organized by the Victoria Low Income Group, failed to deliver a plate to the Queen and present her with a bouquet.

The group's members passed around small paper cups containing the food while the religious Hare Krishna cult group seen recently on downtown city streets chanted non-stop beside the banquet on the grass of the square.

The group set up pails shortly before the Queen was due to arrive at the square.

"We are going to try to present the Queen with these wieners and beans and a bouquet of ribbon flowers made by a woman in this city, group leader Walter Olszewski told reporters.

"If we don't, we'll disperse quietly and mail her the flowers."

After the Queen went past, she gave them a long look as her car pulled away.

"She'll recognize them—if she ever sees them," Miss Pilon said.

A special platter of wieners and beans had been prepared for the Queen. Some people in the crowd accepted the food.

Olszewski said about 30 members of the group showed up, including representatives from Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Vancouver.

Elected, Appointed To Dine With Queen

Only the elected and appointed will attend the dinner aboard Her Majesty's Yacht Britania tonight.

The guest list includes top provincial government figures as well as leading churchmen in Greater Victoria and British Columbia.

Among the selected group who will dine with the Royal Family are:

Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John R. Nicholson, Premier and Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett, federal Fisheries Minister and Mrs. Jack Davis, former Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. Pearkes, B. C. legislative Speaker and Mrs. William Murray, Provincial Secretary and Mrs. Wesley Black, Resources Minister and Mrs. Ray Williston, Industrial Development Minister and Mrs. Waldo Skillings, Public Works Minister and Mrs. William Chant.

Bishop of Victoria Remi De Roo, Bishop of the Diocese of British Columbia and Mrs. Roy F. Gartrell, chairman-elect United Church of B. C. Conference and Rev. Robert J. D. Morris and Mrs. Morris, Victoria Mayor and Mrs. Courtney Haddock, Saanich Mayor and Mrs. Hugh Curtis, and Maritime Forces Pacific Commander Rear Admiral R. H. Leir and Mrs. Leir.

Forces 'Overpower' Washington Protest

WASHINGTON (C.P.) — Anti-Vietnam war protesters' hopes of rekindling guerrilla-style efforts to paralyse the United States government disintegrated today and the defence department began withdrawing 4,000 federal troops from the streets and bridges of the capital.

Wholesale arrests of more than 7,000 persons Monday appeared to have broken the back of the planned three days of disruptions.

400 ARRESTED

As the marines, paratroops and other federal troops began withdrawing from the capital, police reported another 400 arrests had been made today as demoralized bands of young people wandered the streets, apparently leaderless and without design.

The depleted dissident forces, after abandoning a second try at blocking commuter traffic across bridges into the city, made only a token effort at their more modest goal of snarling traffic at major downtown intersections.

Rush-hour traffic — lighter than usual—moved smothly, smoothly.

An early morning march from Washington Circle to DuPont Circle, two of the four traffic circles targeted for today's disruptions, resulted in most of the marchers being arrested.

TEAR GAS NOT USED

Most of today's arrests came without incident and without the tear gas volleys and billy-club swinging of Monday.

Charges of disorderly conduct, obstructing traffic, loitering or unlawful assembly were lodged against most of those arrested today — although several older, well-dressed, well-groomed pedestrians were arrested for jaywalking and taken away in police paddywagons.

Said one long-haired youth: "Everything has broken down today . . . some people are out of it."

Said another: "I'm too tired."

TIRES SLASHED

Some protesters slashed car tires and threw paint at passing motorists today, but police easily contained their sporadic attempts at halting the traffic flow.

About 3,000 antiwar demonstrators marched on the justice department today with Washington's chief of police and his forces keeping close watch on them.

Chief Jerry V. Wilson accompanied protesters on a four-abreast march to the department building which also houses the FBI.

Late Monday night, many detained at police precinct stations were being allowed to go free after posting 10 dollars collateral.

Men detained at the Washington Redskins practice field adjacent to Robert F. Kennedy Stadium were transferred to Washington Coliseum, an old indoor sports arena, and women were moved to the women's detention centre.

Boer War Veteran Dies at 94

Funeral services will be held in Hayward's Funeral Chapel at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday for William Chamberlain Warren, 94, of 1376 Monterey, a veteran of the Boer War and the First World War.

Warren, a retired federal civil servant in the veterans' affairs department, helped to build Victoria's Veterans' Hospital. He was born in Hamilton, Ont.

He was a life member of the Mount Newton Lodge of the Masonic Order, an honorary member of Victoria Lodge of Perfection and was an honorary member of Saanich Peninsula Branch No. 37, Royal Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife Elizabeth, three sons, William Herbert, Victoria; Robert, Black Creek, B.C., and George Arthur, Victoria; four daughters, Mrs. F. B. (Helen) Carter, North Surrey; Mrs. H. (May) Land, Victoria; Mrs. T. (Mary) Dare, Nanaimo, and Mrs. R. (Dorothy) Curral, Kamloops; 19 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren; also four brothers and one sister.

Tofino, Nanaimo Both See Royalty

The royal family split forces today to visit the west coast and up-Island points in the second day of their B.C. tour.

The Queen and Prince Philip first drove to Duncan where the Queen laid the cornerstone for the new centennial library. After meeting loggers and other residents in Ladysmith, they travelled to Nanaimo to witness a fleet of 50 bathtub craft compete around a harbor course.

Princess Anne flew to Tofino this afternoon for an inaugural ceremony at the Pacific rim Park.

Arriving back at the Victoria International Airport at 6:15 p.m. this evening, the Queen's party will leave the airport five minutes later, driving along the Pat Bay Highway, down Douglas, Belleville, and back to the yacht Britannia.

Arriving at the airport at 5:55 p.m., the Princess' motorcade will take the same route back to the royal yacht, arriving at the Inner Harbor at 6:40 p.m.

A dinner party will be held aboard the Britannia at 8:45 p.m.

Welfare Mixed Up In Handout Offer

The B.C. department of rehabilitation will be handing out more money — but not to the people they told to expect it.

An advertisement in Saturday's newspapers, signed by Phil Gaglardi, said the government had authorized payment of up to an additional $30 per month on the basis of need to physically and mentally disabled persons under the federal Disabled Persons Act.

Ray Rickinson, deputy minister, said Monday the ad was a mistake, but wouldn't say how the mix-up had occurred.

The extra $30 will not go to persons already covered by the federal act, Rickinson said. Instead, it will go to persons social assistance, now getting up to $90 a month, who have been considered borderline cases and not eligible for the federal aid.

"The people who qualify under the Disabled Persons Act are already getting this extra," he said. "Our announcement was supposed to cover those who don't quaify for the federal allowance."

Social workers will be responsible for submitting applications on behalf of eligible wefare recipients.

Camosun Boasts Low Activity Fee

The lowest student activity fee, $10, for any college in the Province will be charged at Camosun College next fall.

The $10 activity fee and a $10 registration fee will be collected by the college at registration time, it was decided at a college council meeting Monday.

The college will set fees for the first year of operation since the student government has not yet been formed.

Jack Lindsay, chairman of the college communication committee, presented a report which showed activity fees at other colleges are between $15 and $20.

Six second-year university transfer courses in the arts will be offered, with enrolment limited to 150 students. Students now attending the Institute of Adult Studies will get priority.

Bilingual Districts

OTTAWA (CP) — The creation across Canada of 37 bilingual districts in which federal services must be provided in both French and English is officially recommended in a report tabled in the Commons today.

The report, prepared under the Official Languages Act of 1969 by a 10-member advisory board, may be proclaimed as law any time after Aug. 2.

Designation of all of Quebec and New Brunswick is recommened.

For Ontario, 12 districts are outlined, including five eastern counties, the Windsor-Chatham area, the upper Ottawa Valley and much of the northern area.

Did PM Sleep In Saanichton?

It's believed Prime Minister and Mrs. Trudeau stayed somewhere in Saanichton Monday night.

The prime minister's office reported the Trudeaus were to have stayed at Saanichton and returned to Ottawa today.

N. Saanich Hikes Mill Rate by One

"Although all our costs are up, we anticipated this last year and have managed to absorb most of them," said Mayor Jim Cumming.

General expenditures for 1971 total $985,030 in comparison with $879,027 last year. Taxation for general municipal purposes is $260,777, school tax amounts to $465,308 and the Regional Hospital District levies $5,887.

North Saanich will spend $74,012 on protection to persons and property and $164,250 on capital expenditures; recreation and cultural services are allowed $16,598 and transportation services, $86,250. Social welfare consumes a hearty $47,000.

In other business, council agreed to underwrite $230 worth of expenses already incurred by Canoe Cove Sail Club for a May regatta. Council had, by some third person error, been committed, said Mayor Cumming, and "it must not happen again."

Council gave permission to "Heldrivers" to use a section of Sandowne racetrack for an exhibition of driving on May 8 and 9.

Motorcycle Crash Victim Still in Fair Condition

Diane Daoust, 968 Balmoral, suffered head injuries when the motorcycle on which she was a passenger collided with a car at Jadel Drive about 2:30 p.m.

Ross Fairfield, 945 Runnymede, the 16-year-old motorcycle driver, died in the collision.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre has set Thursday as the date to open an inquest into Fairfield's death. The inquest will start at 7:30 p.m. in the Sands chapel, 1803 Quadra.

Before the Judge

A 21-year-old man was sentenced to four months definite and six months indeterminate in jail Monday by Judge William Ostler on one count of breaking, entering and theft and another of breaking and entering with intent.

David Bossie, of no fixed address, had earlier pleaded guilty to the offences both of which occurred in Victoria.

★ ★ ★

Maurice Edward Crumley, 28, of 1711 Duchess, was committed by Ostler to stand trial in a higher court for breaking, entering and theft and breaking and entering with intent. Crumley waived preliminary hearing for the committal and Ostler set bail at $500.

★ ★ ★

Karen A. Hygard, 20, of 569 Sumas, was fined $250 when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting a sweater from The Bay April 30.

A department store security officer testified the woman took seven sweaters into a fitting room about 6:30 p.m.

Lawrence E. Johnson, 18, of 404 Goward, was fined $200 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused took a number of records March 22 from the Woolco department store in Saanich, concealing them in his jacket. Value of the records was $33.

Macintyre said the youth was later apprehended at Swan Lake standing in water up to his neck.

★ ★ ★

Betty L. West, 26, of Duncan, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a six-month probation for two counts of shoplifting.

She earlier pleaded guilty to taking clothing from The Bay and Eaton's April 8.

MAN DROWNS

COMOX (CP) — Frank Mobley, 51, of Courtenay, drowned early today in an accident involving his 14-foot outboard boat, about four miles southeast of here.

His wife, daughter and a third passenger were rescued shortly after midnight following an air-sea search but Mobley's body was not found until later.

Details of the accident were not known. The boat was still missing.

Tenant President Evicted By Her Own Executive

The president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association has been turfed out of office by her own executive.

The decision to oust Miss Hilda Marshall came Thursday at an executive meeting, said secretary-treasurer Mrs. Anne Tarasoff.

The main reason for the move was Miss Marshall's unauthorized statements to news media, Mrs. Tarasoff said.

A general membership meeting was called Thursday and a lack of confidence vote was to be held, but the turnout did not constitute a quorum. The matter was decided in an executive meeting that followed.

Reasons behind the ouster will be explained in letters to be sent to all members of the association, Mrs. Tarasoff said.

There are no plans to elect another president for the time being, because the executive committee is "very effective," she said.

Take advantage of the handicapped.

If you hire people.
And want capable, productive, committed employees,
you should be hiring the handicapped worker.

Firstly, the word "handicapped" is misleading.
When a worker is disabled he has many skills remaining that maximize his ability and are not affected by his disability.

In that sense, he is not handicapped at all.
And he asks no favors.

Most disabled people have developed new skills.
They show incredibly high standards of productivity. They appreciate their jobs.
And they are stable and reliable.
They have a little extra to prove.
All they ask for is the chance.

A good businessman can spot a solid investment. Hiring the disabled is smart business. Our case histories prove this.
Contact our Rehabilitation Services Department and see what we have to offer. Then take advantage of it.

Cat-astrophe in Saanich

By ROGER STONEBANKS

After many meetings considering the problems of roaming dogs, Saanich council talked about cats Monday night.

In the end, there did not appear to be a solution to a problem raised by Mary Baughn, 1648 Morningside Place.

She complained of roaming cats damaging flowers, killing and frightening birds. The cats were too well fed for traps, she said, and asked "what can be done."

A police report said traps were set twice — unsuccessfully. The report said "if there are any cats in the area the trap will serve its purpose."

Ald. William Noel moved the letter be received and filed. "This is tomcat season anyway," he said.

But Ald. Alan Newberry said the woman had raised a problem "we are inclined to snicker at." He wondered about birth control pills and asked who can deal with the problem.

"The over-population of cats is a regional problem," he said.

Ald. Edith Gunning said "you can't stop cats from roaming" and municipal solicitor D. A. M. Patterson said there is no authority to licence cats.

Ulbricht's Successor Familiar But "Mystery Figure"

HONECKER
. . . dedicated

BONN (WP) — Erich Honecker, the man who emerged Monday as Walter Ulbricht's successor, is both a familiar and a mysterious figure to observers of affairs in East Germany.

He is mysterious because no one in the west really knows what goes on within the closed councils of the East German leadership and what precisely Honecker will do now that he has become first secretary of the state's Communist party.

But he also is familiar because he stood for so long at Ulbricht's right hand that experts on eastern Europe have predicted for almost a decade that he was the crown prince upon whom the succession ultimately would fall.

Both as an administrator who ran the party with whip-crack efficiency and as an ultra-orthodox hardliner in his ideology, the 58-year-old Honecker always has been regarded as a man capable of carrying on the autocratic Ulbricht's Stalinist style of leadership.

DAPPER DRESSER

In fact West German spokesman Conrad Ahlers intimated Monday night that Ulbricht "at least was a man with a sense of German nationhood" and that the west might find Honecker even harder to deal with than his predecessor.

Personally, Honecker is known to be dapper in his dress, but otherwise colorless, lacking in humor and neat to the point of fussiness a perfect combination someone once remarked for the leader ship of a state built largely out of the former Prussian part of Germany.

The one-time roof slater is not a Prussian though. He was born in the Saarland the most western part of Germany to parents who were dedicated Communists. At the age of eight, he already was helping his mother to deliver the Communist party newspaper.

He himself joined the party as soon as he was in his teens; in 1934, at the age of 22, he was sent to Berlin to help organize the Communist underground resistance to the Nazis. Apprehended by the Gestapo two years later, he was sent to prison for "high treason" and remained there until liberated by Soviet troops in 1945.

Upon his release, Honecker entered party work in the Soviet zone that was to become East Germany. Over the next decade, he rose steadily in party ranks, being elected a member of the central committee in 1959 and soon after that a candidate member of the politburo.

During this period, he took time out for a three-year stint in Moscow to study the Soviet party system, and, on his return to East Germany, his career really began to soar.

In 1963, he became a full member of the Pohtburo and took charge both of the party organization and the entire East Germany security apparatus, including the army, police and the various state security organizations.

BEST BET

It was from that point on that he became labbed as the best bet to succeed Ulbricht. In the ensuing years, as Ulbricht's age and health began to tell on him, Honecker moved more and more to the front, taking over the day-to-day operation of the party, representing East Berlin at important gatherings of the Communist bloc, and making the major speeches at important party affairs.

More recently, he was known to have something of a rival in Premier Willi Stoph, but most expert observers remained convinced that Stoph never was able to equal Honecker. Monday, this belief in Honecker's staying power was shown to have been correct.

As to Honecker's personal life, very little is known except for the fact that he has been married twice and that his second wife, Margot, is an East German personality in her own right. She serves as the regime's minister of education.

Bodies Found

LONDON (AP) — Police found three bodies in a burned-out house and another at the side of a railway line early today and began a murder inquiry.

Detectives called to a fire in Wealdstone, a London suburb, found that two women in the house died before the blaze began. A man had been so badly burned police were not sure how he died.

Shortly afterward, other officers investigated the discovery of a body on a nearby railway track. This man appeared to have been hit by a train.

"The two incidents are believed connected," a police spokesman said.

The dead people in the house were believed the owner and two elderly lodgers.

A girl was taken to hospital from the scene of the fire. She was said to be in satisfactory condition.

Assurance To Be Sought

Saanich council will ask the federal transport department for full assurance that the proposed breakwater off Royal Victoria Yacht Club in Oak Bay will not adversely affect the shores of Cadboro Bay, most of which are in Saanich.

The decision by council was unanimous. Ald. Foster Isherwood, who introduced the subject, said the purpose of the motion is "to assure ourselves that the Cadboro Bay shores will be in no way

Youth Talks

A youth conference will be held in the Gordon Head Recreation Centre auditorium Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. sponsored by Saanich council's youth committee.

Purpose is to determine a consensus of parents and young people in the Gordon Head area regarding recreational programs and facilities in which the municipality may become involved, said Ald. Alan Newberry.

Apartment Hearing

One apartment project in Gordon Head was sent to a public hearing Monday night by Saanich council while another planned apartment was rejected.

Low-density apartments are planned in a submission by Wagg and Hambleton for 3990 Shelbourne and 3993 Cedar Hill Road. A public hearing will be held at a date to be set later.

Turned down was a 96-unit extension of the Gordon Head townhouses, at the southeast corner of Larchwood and Forest Road. The Advisory Planning Commission said the proposal lacked quality and design.

Council approved development plans for municipally-owned land at Cook-Maplewood for a 117-suite apartment project by Litwin Construction Ltd., subject to extra screening adjacent to residential properties and at trees at least four feet high on the westerly boundary.

On another matter, council was informed that local petition for curbs, gutters, sidewalks and drains on Tillicum Road between Gorge and Burnside failed, which engineer Neville Life said later meant the end to the planned $470,000 reconstruction and widening of the road.

Cedar Hill Clubhouse To Get Beer-Wine Licence

Saanich council agreed unanimously Monday night to have a beer-and-wine licence, with meals, at the municipally-owned and operated Cedar Hill golf course clubhouse.

It was disclosed last week that the municipality was holding such a licence, although the subject had never come before council for a decision.

When municipal solicitor D. A. M. Patterson was asked his opinion, he said he didn't think a committee of council had the power to apply for a licence. Council would have to ratify such a decision, or initiate it in the first place, he said.

Ald. Foster Isherwood, who raised the issue, said it was important enough to be discussed and decided by council.

ADMINISTERED

"I just want to see this administered properly," he said. "I am prepared to support the committee. I don't want to wake up another day and find it in the arena because it's profitable."

Ald. William Noel, chairman of the golf course management committee, said: "I guess I'm the target for this problem. Man cannot live by bread alone.

"Our recreation manager was asked to look into the matter of a licence but he was not responsible for doing this on his own. The only thing I can say in my defence is . . . to forgive and forget. I'm the goat."

NOT THERE

Acting Mayor Ald. Leslie Passmore said "you're only a third of the goat because I was also on the committee."

The third member of the committee, Mayor Hugh Curtis, was not at the council meeting because of the royal visit.

Passmore said he felt the committee had authority to act and he supported the move.

Plans on Schedule

Sewerage progress in Gordon Head isn't behind schedule, Saanich engineer Neville Life said Monday night.

Ald. William Noel had told council he understood Gordon Head sewerage was behind schedule.

Life said this information is "quite incorrect." Saanich was ready to go to tender on the east slope as soon as a money bylaw is approved and a 30-day waiting period to allow residents to petition for a referendum is up.

Council awarded a $96,743 contract to low-bidding Chew Excavating Ltd. to finish sewerage work in the Marigold area, including a trunk line along Interurban Road to regional district mains at Hyacinth Park. The contract excludes materials worth $22,750 which Saanich will supply. Target date for completion of this work is mid-August.

Mr. Kierans Spells It Out

IF MR. ERIC KIERANS, WHO resigned last week from the federal cabinet, intends to devote some time to the wider field of speaking to the Canadian public rather than to his government colleagues, he may find a good many Canadians willing to listen to him. His Sunday evening television interview made a number of provocative points, most of them in the direction of getting a better Canadian control of Canada's economy.

Dealing with the extractive industries, such as oil and gas, Mr. Kierans said that the incentives given to these industries in an effort to develop Canadian resources resulted in such corporations paying taxes on a very low percentage of their income. In passing, he noted that since most of the investment in Canadian gas and oil is from the United States, the tax concessions through abatements, deferred payments, accelerated depreciation and such devices are savings for the Americans and a loss to Canada.

The big argument for encouraging American investment in Canada has been that this country would thereby receive the benefits of the resulting payrolls, and the taxes to be levied on the profits. Mr. Kierans' comments indicate that we get a minimum in payrolls because many of the industries concentrate on equipment rather than manpower, and we derive a minimum of tax revenue from the profits. What, then, are we really getting? The answer to that suggests that Canadians are indeed the world's worst bargainers — another of Mr. Kierans' observations.

In pursuing export business, Canada depends heavily on the shipment of raw materials and barely processed manufactures. This means that foreign importers — largely American — use our resources to build their own domestic manufacturing and processing industries — yet Canadian government policy seems designed to encourage this trend rather than reverse it. Government thinking, also according to Mr. Kierans, encourages industries which are highly mechanized through tax relief on investment in equipment, whereas industries which employ large numbers of workers do not have this advantage. The policy is thus anti-employment in its effect, at a time when the opposite movement should be fostered, says the ex-Minister of Communications.

These are provocative ideas — not new, but with added emphasis coming from Mr. Kierans. They indicate that a new appraisal of Canada's overall economic policies should be made, to see to what goal we should be moving and if what we are doing is getting us there. At the moment it appears that we are managing our great natural heritage with something less than top intelligence. Do foreign businessmen look on Canadians as bumpkins at the fair?

Wheat and Ping-Pong

IN THE NEW ERA OF PING-pong internationalism, Australia appears to have stumbled over an old ideology — and at substantial cost. For years the Australian government sold most of its export wheat to China. At the same time it followed a propaganda line picturing Peking as the home of a warmongering giant. This was aimed at domestic consumption in a land that has a notable history of anti-Communist neurosis. So long as the wheat sales continued, the criticism of China continued. But now the sales are drying up.

An apparently resentful China is diverting its business elsewhere — a process not difficult among nations which, if not new-found friends, are at least less hostile in their pronouncements about Peking. The loss of the market is pinching Australia and creating difficulties between the government and the farmers. These difficulties are being exploited by the Labor Party, whose attitude to Red China has been substantially less provocative than that of the government.

So now the Australians have a ping-pong team in China, following the course set by earlier table-tennis players from other countries. But the group has apparently not yet smoothed away Chinese resentment against a government policy that has been batting the "Communist and yellow hordes" ball back and forth.

Prospects are that the Australian attitude will soften. In the meantime, the farmers look with little success for a renewal of Chinese imports of Australian wheat. Politics down under apparently has gone one step beyond bread and butter considerations. It's now down to the stuff the bread is made from.

Progress Through Co-operation

THE SUGGESTION MADE IN an article in the New York Times by Mr. Najeeb Halaby, president of Pan American World Airways, to convene an international conference on supersonic transport, could be applied to other areas of scientific advance. Mr. Halaby speaks of "technological togetherness" in the years ahead and refers in his article to the progress already achieved in international co-operation in outer space, medicine and the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

As president of a firm with global connections, a broad outlook must come as naturally to Mr. Halaby as to world politicians. There are many ways in which the nations could exchange views and techniques in the great variety of technological matters which make up the sum of our material progress.

Are global corporations to compete with enlightened governmental efforts to knit the world together? If so, it is a kind of competition which will do the world no harm. Indeed, it would be the assumption of a responsibility which should be complementary to the commercial ambitions of corporate giants.

'Hail to Thee . . .'

IT IS DISCOURAGING TO LEARN of the decline in the skylark population at the University of Victoria grounds, but gratifying to hear that prospects are bright for the bird's survival, even in reduced numbers.

The skylark at Gordon Head has a particular place in the hearts of Victorians, a traditional connotation since its introduction many years ago, and a symbolic implication as a result of the first pledge of Chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown, on his investiture, to work for the songster's preservation — an example of non-materialist values.

Beyond that, it is cheering to know that the blithe spirit persists at the University of Victoria in contrast to so much that is acrimonious in recent reports from that centre of higher learning and culture.

". . . but of course you are still my queen . . . but my Queen is my Queen in a different way than you are my queen . . ."

High-Priced Protection

New York Times

A major crisis with Japan that could damage American security interests severely is looming as a result of President Nixon's decision to hand back Okinawa by treaty, rather than executive agreement. A treaty would require a two-thirds Senate vote; the alternative course would require at most a majority vote of both houses of Congress.

The White House decision, if not reversed shortly, could make the Okinawa accords now being negotiated with Tokyo hostage to the Southern textile lobby and other protectionist interests.

The Japanese suspect that Mr. Nixon chose the treaty route for this very purpose—to fulfil his campaign promise to the textile industry and thus keep open a "Southern strategy" for 1972.

It was only Mr. Nixon's November 1969 pledge to hand Okinawa back, in return for non-nuclear base rights, that enabled Mr. Satō to push through renewal last year of the Japanese-American security treaty. If the Nixon pledge now becomes a poker chip for textile protectionists of Capitol Hill, the result could be anti-American riots that might ultimately force abandonment of United States bases not only in Okinawa but in Japan proper. However, more is at stake than bases.

FROM WASHINGTON

By MAX FRANKEL

Considering Russia While Playing Peking Ping-Pong

WHEN PRESIDENT NIXON asked Henry Cabot Lodge at the White House last week whether he'd learned to play ping-pong yet, he was betraying the obvious fascination of this Government with the prospect of further new dealings with Peking. And as the President's light-hearted tone suggested, he is confident that he could have a new relationship and escape the political restraints that he, among others, created for previous presidents.

For a decade now, the men in the White House have longed for at least a modest thaw in relations with Communist China so as to lay the basis for a stable peace in the Pacific. They have been deterred not only by the problem of Taiwan and by international developments, but by the persistent political threat of those who had capitalized on the charge that the Democrats "lost" China to Communism in 1949.

Nixon raised the issue with John F. Kennedy shortly after he and Lodge lost their race for president and vice-president in 1960. Admitting Peking even to the United Nations General Assembly, without a big-power veto, Nixon remembers saying, would mock that organization's interest in "peace-loving nations." Even worse he added, it would "give respectability" to Peking, increase its power and prestige and "probably irreparably weaken" its non-Communist neighbors.

Former President Eisenhower warned Kennedy that acceptance of Communist China would force him out of retirement to lead the Opposition.

And Kennedy, though he felt it made no sense to have Taiwan represent China in the world organization, told Adlai Stevenson to block any change at all costs: "If Red China comes into the U.N. during our first year in town, your first year and mine, they'll run us both out," he is quoted as saying.

Taiwan Pressure

That was 1961, and before it ended the friends of Taiwan also frightened Kennedy into dropping the much more modest project of recognizing Outer Mongolia, whose territory the Nationalist Chinese still claim.

In 1962, opposition and caution inside the United States Government frustrated Kennedy's willingness to have Chester Bowles explore the idea of selling wheat to a needy Peking. Also that year, the Government and most Americans let their preconceptions accept India's charges of Communist Chinese "aggression," a view that sound scholarship has now challenged.

And by 1963, after making a limited test-ban treaty with Moscow, Kennedy edged toward the Soviet view of Communist China and deemed it to be the larger long-term threat to peace.

But President Lyndon B. Johnson revived the dreams of thaw, once remarking to a reporter after his massive intervention in Vietnam, that he would "re-establish relations with a quarter of the human race . . . and ain't nobody gonna call me an appeaser!" The war in Indochina and the Chinese Cultural Revolution at home frustrated his hopes, too, and the decade ended with no significant contact except the periodic formal meetings of ambassadors in Warsaw.

Nixon talked vaguely of better relations with Communist China during his campaign and began to define his meaning in his two state-of-the-world messages. In the most recent of these, last February, he called the Peking regime by its proper name, the People's Republic of China, recalled how he had lifted some trade and travel restrictions, spoke understandingly of Peking's hostility toward the world and said its doctrines of violence had been "proclaimed more often than followed."

Long-Range Strategy

The president's thinking about all this is said to be strategic rather than tactical, looking to a long-run Pacific power-balance among Communist China, the Soviet Union, Japan and the United States and beyond the immediate problems of U.N. representation or formal diplomatic recognition.

To Nixon, the prospect of dealings with Peking implies the further benefit of forcing Moscow to reassess the world situation. The fear of encirclement has long dominated Russian strategic thinking and a three-way big-power diplomacy might evoke a new desire to reduce tensions in the West. It is thought here that China, too, may see advantages against Moscow in breaking her isolation and there is some suspicion that her ping-pong players are even better on a triangular table.

Shrinking Park

In 1969 the proposal to reserve a Cape Scott area for park use was announced and at the time there was much publicity given to the land swap involved regarding Strathcona Park and timber cutting rights. The area envisaged in this proposal was approximately 60 square miles and involved about 56 miles of coastline.

By May of last year, 1970, it was apparent that this proposal was meeting much opposition from the mining and forestry interests and there was indication that the size of the area reserved was likely to be reduced due to this conflict of interest. The area was under "map reserve" only and until formal protection of these lands is effected under the Land Act by a cabinet order-in-council, the area in question remains the subject of proposal only.

At present, this proposed Park now involves an area of approximately 40 square miles and a correspondingly lesser extent of coastline. In the intervening months since the 1969 announcement, the "conflict of interests" has apparently succeeded in shrinking the proposal by one-third at this still infant stage of the park development.

Last year, a government official said, "the outcome of the impending conflict of interests depends on how much public interest is shown in having a park at Cape Scott."

I suggest, that if the public is interested, citizens should write their member or the minister of recreation and express their desire for this proposal to be finalized before any further reduction of the park area is envisaged due to other than recreational interests.

A reporter writing about this proposed park after the 1969 announcement said, "it's worth waiting for" after having flown into the area and explored its features.

This is true and the relatively few who visit this area either by boat, plane or by hiking in, would be the first to agree but one wonders how much of it will be left before the Park boundaries are formally established.—R. E. Wells.

Gratuitous Insult

Your Mr. Jack Scott might have spared us his crocodile tears with reference to the circumstances of the Royal visit that he chooses to consider as tarnishing the image of the Queen.

He is well aware that as a Canadian taxpayer he contributes not one cent toward the upkeep of the Royal yacht, nor towards any other royal expenses for that matter. It follows that for him to abuse the British for having arranged the Queen's visit in a manner befitting her station is mere impertinence. If he is so concerned about governmental extravagance, I would suggest he need look no further than our own country.

It ought to be obvious that if Britain is to have a Navy, their men must have adequate sea training, and that many aspects of this can be as well accomplished on the Royal yacht as elsewhere. It is doubtful if the present trip would substantially exceed in cost that of maintenance of the ship in England. As to the musicians whose presence drives him to such heights of irrational fury, has he never before heard of bandsmen in our armed forces?

Mr. Scott appears to be in a state of confusion as to whom he can blame for the deplorable situation he has uncovered. One would think it would in any case be clear to him that the officers and men had not asked to come here, but nevertheless he goes out of his way to offer them a gratuitous insult.—E. C. S. Woodcock, 4180 Cedar Hill.

God Bless Her

It is regrettable that some individuals have chosen the time we expect royal visitors to express unfriendly sentiments toward the monarchy. Granted, it is their right, but is it good manners when you are expecting guests to publish such beliefs?

If we were expecting an invited visitor from the Kremlin we would, I think, be out of line to proclaim our dislike or disagreement with communism on the occasion of the visit.

In my opinion, the monarchy, and the Queen particularly, is doing a tremendous and arduous job in the maintenance of sanity, decency, and balance, not only in the commonwealth, but in the world.

Worst In Memory

Once upon a time (not a hundred years ago) the post office department was considered the most efficient of all the federal government departments. When Mr. Eric Kierans was appointed postmaster-general he had some ideas of smartening up this important department. Most of these ideas he never had a chance to try. The postal unions saw to that.

What have we got now? A superabundance of personnel, higher wages, shorter hours, more holidays, two strikes in the same number of years, an increase in postal rates, with another increase to come; and the worst postal service I can ever remember.

Protection

May I take the liberty of replying to "Disgusted Mother" (April 29) who attacks the birth control clinics in connection with the high school students? I, too, am disgusted. But disgusted with the abortions that I must assist with in the operating room. Yes, I could refuse to assist but would be asked to transfer from this area where I have invested years of special training.

Many of these patients seem mere children themselves, terrified of the "needle" they get to put them to sleep.

"Disgusted mother" speaks of the viciousness of a mother protecting her young. Surely we adults owe it to our young people, who are exposed to sex ("Bombarded" would be more appropriate!) from all sides, to offer the protection of a true and thorough education in all the aspects. I am sure that much time is devoted to the responsibilities of indulgence, as well as the mere physiological explanation of egg meeting sperm, when the subject is taught in the schools.

In reply to the often voiced opinion that by giving the pill to the young unmarried girl we are encouraging promiscuity, I have heard several doctors state that any such girl who has come to them requesting birth control information is already indulging in intercourse.

If we protect them from polio, flu, smallpox and assorted other illnesses, surely we can protect them from an ill-timed pregnancy.—"Disgusted Nurse".

Civil War?

I was most interested in reading Maurice Western's article "Presiding over a divided party and a civil war."

Although I am 100 per cent for a united Canada I would like to ask Mr. Western and my fellow-Canadians if we would be prepared to use military force against Quebec in case that province elected freely, in a democratic way, for separation from Canada. In my view that would be the only alternative and in this day and age I doubt very much if we would be prepared to fight a cruel civil war, as the U.S. did in 1861, to preserve the unity of our nation.

Although I do not subscribe to the views held by the waffle group of the NDP surely this is exactly what they are trying to clarify and avoid. We can see the cruelty of a civil war in East Pakistan where the vast majority voted freely for a form of separation or increased autonomy. Do we want that here in Canada?—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar.

Looking Back

From the Times of May 4, 1911:

GLASGOW — The Duke of Connaught, receiving the freedom of the city yesterday, referred to his appointment as governor-general of Canada, and said that none of the dominions beyond the seas had more Scots than Canada, in whose advancement and prospects they played an important part. Emigration out of Britain must be expected to continue and he hoped more will wend their way Canada-wards.

Of Mice And Men

By TOM HUTH

Dr. John Calhoun's laboratory mice are dying. They are doomed, he says, to extinction.

Physically they are healthy — to him they are even beautiful. But most of them are withdrawn, uncomplaining, uninvolved, without aggression. And they are without sex, so they are dying.

They are dying of overpopulation. And, Dr. Calhoun says, there are lessons for man in his grim little mousery.

Calhoun works as a research psychologist for the National Institute of Mental Health.

In the beginning, he put eight white mice, four pairs, into an 8½-by 8½-foot galvanized steel universe on the upper floor of a corrugated iron building at the National Institute of Health's animal farm in Montgomery County, MD.

The mice had warmth, food, no disease, no predators. In a little more than two years there were 2,200 of them. But by that time they were not mice, Calhoun says. They were something else, non-mice, their social organizations destroyed and their behaviors deformed by overcrowding.

Irreversible

Now 600 of them have expired and the other 1,600 will too, Calhoun says. There has not been a mouse born in more than a year; the youngest is 40 years old in terms of the human life span. The females are passing menopause. Soon time will run out: the process will be irreversible; life will be death.

Calhoun thinks that time has not yet run out for man — that man has perhaps 15 years to start making the decisions that will insure his continued survival as a unique animal, to start bringing the world population down to what it was before the time of Christ.

It is this great leap in thinking, from mouse to man, that puts frowns on the faces of some scientists when the name John B. Calhoun is mentioned.

For one thing, critics say, the behavior of mice does not describe the behavior of men.

Calhoun answers that "rats and mice, of course, are not perfect models of humans. But the disaster they represent is so compelling that the world cannot wait for proof of every step in the equation."

To criticism that his mice are so inbred that they don't react normally, Calhoun says, "wild species suffer the same reactions as my albinos, sometimes even in exaggerated form."

To conventional science, there also is a madness to Calhoun's methodology. He develops and publishes theory without first presenting fully documented findings in scientific journals. He draws conclusions and exposes them to public attention before his experiments are completed.

"So sometimes we make errors in what we say," Calhoun admits. "But there are about 15 years left for deciding. We're that close to seeing if evolution will continue."

His present experiment was in the planning stage in 1965 and will not be fully analyzed until 1973.

Close to Reality

Calhoun, a psychologist, philosopher, ecologist, mathematician and sociologist at various moments, has been overpopulating rodents since 1946, when he joined a group at Johns Hopkins University that was looking into the behavior of norway rats.

A few other scientists have done similar population studies, but none has created an environment that comes close to approximating reality, Calhoun says.

Dr. John Calhoun stands amid his 1,600 mice

The environment that he and his team members have created for the white mice includes 256 apartments, feeding bins where the animals congregate for social purposes as well as for eating, and a floor that serves as an arena for social groupings. Mice that exhibit different types of behavior are painted with brightly colored stripes, and the dates have been put on 750,000 cards and fed to a computer.

The eight original animals quickly multiplied to 150, which he says was the ideal number for the setting because it provided each mouse with the right amount of interaction to maintain gratification and stability. In nature, the population would remain steady at about 150.

"Organisms fabricate products and also dispose of them," he explains. "So in nature the capacity to fabricate — fertilization — is geared to disposal factors — disease, predators, migration. We've eliminated them all."

The population of the colony quickly jumped to four times the optimium, or about 600. The adults already had formed 14 distinct social groups, which they apparently considered the comfortable number. When the young ones reached maturity and tried to join groups, they were rejected, except for a few who managed to replace some of their aging brethren.

Most of the young mice, about 400 of them, withdrew in a huddled mass in the middle of the cage. "They were treated as sticks and stones," Calhoun says.

Bite Neighbors

"Once rejected they were outside the system. They were extremely violent, they would attack and slash and turn on a neighbor and bite," attempting to reduce social contacts.

Calhoun wrote in the Smithsonian Magazine, "Still the socially settled kept breeding, just as lemmings do in that last fall and winter before their major march to the sea. In this last frenzy of reproduction 1,600 more mice were spewed out into this closed environment.

"A replica of 'spaceship earth?' They too found no social 'rooms' in which to mature. As each member of his horde grew physically it began to express its natural behavior, trying to take part in sex and other acts of social intercourse that are necessary for survival of the species. But rarely was a mouse able to complete this action before it was interrupted by some associate.

"Only the simplest behaviors, such as eating and drinking, were ever carried to completion. The mice never really learned to mate or fight. Never fighting, never competing for mates, never protecting young, they never knew stress.

"Most matured into passive blobs of protoplasm, physically healthy but socially sterile."

The young mice, often rejected and bitten by their own mothers, never learned to relate to others.

The mice were "frozen in a childlike trance," Calhoun wrote.

Earlier in the study, Calhoun or an associate would walk in the cage and the curious young mice would approach the strange feet, "then accept them as an irrelevant aspect of their environment and pay no attention to them."

But now scores of mice will scurry in a horde after a pair of sneaker-clad feet and will continue to sniff and probe them. "These poor beautiful mice never learn," Calhoun says. "Each day they follow human feet about as if they had never seen them before."

And above all, "They are voiceless. They are deathly quiet. Lost are the plaintive squeaks of recognition, the higher squeaks of inquisitive anxiety, the shrill squeaks accompanying intense social involvement. A pallor of silence hangs over the flaccid following mass."

The experiment is nearly over. Groups of mice with similar behavior have been placed in separate cages to study their reactions to each other. Then individuals will be studies in isolation. When the population declines to 1,000, all the females will have passed menopause. There will be no chance of further life, and the survivors will be disposed of.

Parallels

The characteristics he sees in mice can be observed in man, Calhoun believes.

There is, for example, the violence of the slums and elsewhere in America. Calhoun thinks this "may at times be necessary to precipitate a more meaningful exchange between individuals or institutions where social tradition and lack of designed relations have sufficiently separated them that they no longer can communicate about common interests."

Violence, in other words, serves to alert society that something is wrong.

Calhoun bases his broad philosophy of the human condition on the belief that, while other animals are limited in growth to physical space, man is unique in developing what he calls conceptual space.

Conceptual Space

Until 40,000 or 50,000 years ago, men were able to limit their social contacts and thus preserve stability only by moving to other areas and killing or being killed.

Then, says Calhoun, as uninhabited areas became populated and physical contact increased, some downtrodden group discovered conceptual space, which he defines as the "information pool from which rules, codes and theories may be condensed which permit more effective coping with the physical and social environment."

Man, and only man, could fully develop social roles and find meaningful relationships while screening out frustrating ones. This, says Calhoun, has allowed human population to increase, and to increase faster and faster as intellectual capacity became greater and greater.

Since about that time, 40,000 years ago, the time it has taken for world population to double has been cut in half with each doubling. So, while it took 160 years for population to reach 1.25 billion by 1868, it took only 80 years for it to reach 2.5 billion and by 1948 and it will take roughly 40 years for it to reach five billion.

A continuation of this progression would lead to a mathematical impossibility by the year 2027. The growth would become so fast that "you go to infinity instanteously," as Calhoun puts it. Some have called it doomsday.

Another problem, the one that is the key to Calhoun's theories and admittedly "the weakest point in my argument," is that in his thinking the total of all conceptual space will level off when the world reaches 9 billion people.

By that time—in 2010, give or take several years depending on birth control — he figures that world will be one community.

It is this idea of the global village, plus a projection of the limits of the brain—plus analogy and intuition, that leads Calhoun to believe that by the early 21st century conceptual space will stop growing.

This he sees as the end of the first era of human evolution. By simple mathematics, any increase in population would mean a decrease in the intellectual potential of each person.

"Extra individuals will impede acquisition of relevant information," he says.

Three Options

Then man will have three courses, Calhoun says.

- Population could continue to increase and awareness would decrease.
- Population could remain level, with each individual filling a static role with little deviation from "the exact pattern harmonizing with a traditional niche he entered early in life."
- Population could gradually decrease, allowing a growth in individual potential. The time when this begins happening Calhoun calls downsday.

It may not come, he says, until the year 2400 or so, by which time the population may have overshot to maybe 13½ billion. Then the decline in population would continue for 160,000 years, by his calculation, until it reached about 70 million, the same as during the golden age of Greece 500 years before Christ. His calculations end there, for now.

Time Running Out For Us to Avoid Death by Crowding

Cuba Still Hunts Freedom

By SIR HERBERT MARCHANT

"There are laws of political as well as of physical gravitation," wrote John Quincy Adams, "and if an apple, severed by the tempest from its native tree, cannot choose but fall to the ground, Cuba, forcible disjoined from its own unnatural connection with Spain, can gravitate only towards the North American union."

"Cuba: The Pursuit of Freedom" is Hugh Thomas' account of how Cuba came to defy these laws of political gravitation only to find herself joined in an even more "unnatural connection" — an asphyxiating dependence on the Soviet Union.

•

"The Roads of my Cuba," so runs a sad little Cuban song, "never lead where they should."

It was as long ago as 1961 that the author, who had already given us the definitive history of the Spanish civil war, set out to write his account of the Cuban revolution.

The offering he now makes us is a monument of industry and scholarship: 1,700 pages of scrupulously documented social history starting in 1762 with the capture of Havana by the British, and all tricked out with illustrations, family trees, maps, a glossary, 14 appendices, copious notes and a 70-page epilogue to bring the narrative right up to date. In short, a book that is uncommonly difficult to hold in the hand, but fascinatingly easy to read.

If the first half is pure history, the second is a happy mixture of history and good journalism, based not merely on fastidious documentary research, but on the author's conversations with a host of personalities in Cuba and in the United States who played a part in the country's recent history. It is, of course, a long haul from page 1 to page 1696, but you are in good company all the way.

Cuba is a highly desirable piece of real estate, separated from the United States by a mere 90 miles of Gulf Stream. It is not surprising then, particularly in view of the economic potential of her sugar, that annexation has been under active and almost permanent consideration by America ever since she sent the first of a long line of controversial envoys to Cuba 200 years ago — often to the detriment of U.S.-Cuban relations.

Prof. Thomas gives these relations his full and critical attention. As a professional historian he must, by now, be case-hardened to the political skullduggery normally practiced in the 18th and 19th centuries by powerful countries towards their weaker neighbors.

But as a liberal (British style) Welshman, he clearly finds it difficult to write dispassionately about some of the manoeuvring in U.S.-Cuban relations — particularly during the Castro era where the CIA was involved. The narrative makes abundantly clear just why.

The author has an eye for significant and colorful detail and his portrait of Castro is the best of the many I have read. This 6 foot 4 prima donna — he weighed 10 lbs. at birth 45 years ago — is bigger than real life in almost every respect.

His personal brand of charisma may mystify Anglo-Saxons, but it has enabled him to achieve and retain dictatorial powers as absolute as any in the world today.

Thomas points out how, already in the Sierras, Castro proved himself to be as shrewd a politicians as he was a successful guerrilla leader by accommodating himself with existing political parties as well as with the Catholic church.

It is difficult to understand how this charisma, this political astuteness together with an astonishing ability to tiptoe out of a corner into which he has painted himself, could all have been so consistently underrated by American intelligence — and indeed by some western diplomats on the spot.

Many people, both Cuban and American, believe that Castro has always been a communist. Thomas does not, and shows how it was only after his accession to power that he began to abandon his early rather vague liberal idealism — and then largely as a matter of expediency because Cuba needed Soviet aid to stay alive.

In fact, as this book amply demonstrates, Castro's current ideology is a strangely personalized brand of Marxism, loose-fitting and nationalist, such as would be quite unacceptable in a Soviet citizen.

What of the effects of Castro's brand of communism on the economy of the country and the lives of its citizens? The balance sheet which the author draws up in his final chapter is wholly admirable in its clarity and its impartiality after outlining the benefits which have accrued to Cuba under Castro he writes:

"It should be possible to stand back and welcome such changes that are incontestably benevolent, to question those that seem of uncertain merit, to denounce those which have been unjust or mistaken; to criticize tyrannical methods even if these resulted in some good being done." This is precisely what Thomas has succeeded doing.

His conclusions, alas, make depressing reading for the many of us who had high hopes for the early idealism of the revolution. True, the corruption and venality of the Batista regime — "so great that even Latin Americans were astonished by it" — have been abolished. True, the Cuban people now enjoy a pride of nationhood, full employment and education for all. But what of the price they are paying! — The loss of their rights as individuals, a near bankrupt economy and dependence on the Soviet Union for their survival.

Perhaps it is too early to judge the success or failure of a 12-year-old revolution, but there is little in the picture Prof. Thomas paints of contemporary Cuba to suggest that Castro will be willing or able to change the course to which he has committed it. Poor Cuba, her "pursuit of freedom" is clearly not yet at an end.

Another Myth Gone

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

Cold but cruel science has exploded the myth that the Welsh, above all their cousins in the British Isles, are specially gifted musically.

Two researchers, the science journal Nature reports, set out to examine the commonly held belief — especially in Wales — that descendants of the Celts have musical superiority over their English and Norman conquerors.

They tested 18 boys and girls each from three schools, one where the students were exclusively Welsh-speaking and therefore presumably of pure Welsh descent, one on the Welsh-English border where both languages were spoken, and one in the east of England. The children of the different schools were carefully matched for age, intelligence and socio-economic status. They were given a series of tests, using well-established examination methods, to determine musical abilities.

The only significant correlation with high musical talent and ability was with high intelligence. Variations in test scores associated with sex and nationality differences were entirely random.

The findings, it is fairly certain, will do nothing to inhibit the Welsh either from singing or continuing to insist that they sing better than anyone else.

Problems With the Golden Goose

TRUDEAU

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — What does Ontario want?

Federal officials now are asking themselves this question after years of pondering what Quebec wants.

Despite some political needling of the Ontario government by Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Benson, the capital is taking the province's promised — or threatened—new look into its role in Confederation.

"You have to take Ontario seriously because Ontario, as Robarts said, is the golden goose," one authority here declared.

Former premier John Robarts, who speaks at the National Press Club here today, said recently that Ottawa's economic policies are killing the golden goose.

Since Premier William Davis took over from Mr. Robarts in March, Ontario's criticism of the federal government has been growing.

Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said in his budget address last week that Ottawa's policies are hurting Ontario economically.

Mr. Trudeau said in the Commons the day after Mr. McKeough's budget presentation:

"It is an established practice for weak governments to try to have the combat on federal ground rather than on provincial issues."

The implication was that the Davis administration is going to make Ottawa's alleged goose-killing an issue in the coming provincial election.

As for Mr. McKeough's reference to a close look at Ontario's fundamental role in Confederation, Mr. Benson said all provinces are supposed to be studying this very subject in preparation for the federal-provincial constitutional conference in Victoria in June.

Mr. Benson also tossed in a remark about Ontario's "fiscal blackmail."

These cracks aside, the capital is not making light of Ontario's criticisms or of its proposals to opt out of shared-cost programs and to assume jurisdiction, as Quebec wants, over cable television.

ESSENTIAL TO CANADA

Confederation could not function without Ontario any more than it could without Quebec, officials said. And on a financial basis, Ontario would be missed more than Quebec.

Ontario now is the source of most of Ottawa's tax revenue, including that used for equalization and regional economic expansion grants to less wealthy provinces, mainly Quebec.

On the other hand, Ontario has a huge trade surplus with the other provinces. And if it pays more in income tax, it is because it has most of Canada's wealthy people.

However, federal officials decline to get into any dollars-and-cents dispute with Ontario. They say accurate figures just are not available and probably never will be on the dollar contribution by each of the partners in Confederation.

Finance and other officials objected strongly—and vainly — last year when Quebec MPs prepared a financial table purporting to show that Quebec benefitted hugely from Confederation. The table was used during the Quebec provincial election.

POSES QUESTION

A big question here is whether Mr. Davis will support as strongly as Mr. Robarts did equalization and other grants for which Ontario supplies most of the money.

Federal authorities say they sense that Mr. Davis does not feel the same urgency about constitutional reform as Mr. Robarts did although Ontario seemed to want, like Quebec, more taxing powers.

MP 'Silent Majority' Pushes Pay Bill On

By DAN TURNER

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons silent majority moved in Monday to vote for second-reading approval of a bill to increase the pay of MPs and senators.

Although almost all who have spoken on the bill during the last three days have committed themselves to fighting it, it soared over its first parliamentary hurdle by an easy 109 to 31 margin.

The legislation, which would increase the salaries of MPs and senators to $18,000 from $12,000, now goes to committee for clause-by-clause examination and possible amendment.

It would also increase the tax-free expense accounts of MPs to $8,000 from $6,000 and for senators to $4,000 from $3,000.

Voting against the second-reading motion were 18 NDP members, 12 Creditistes and Stan Schumacher (PC—Palliser).

THREE CRITICS ABSENT

Those who voted no were mainly the members who have expressed opposition to the bill, although three of its most notable critics were absent.

Missing were Liberal members Paul St. Pierre (Coast-Chilcotin), Douglas Hogarth (New Westminster) and Tom Goode (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta), all of whom said earlier they will not accept the pay increases.

Nearly all who voted in favor have been quiet during the debate, with the notable exception of John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview), who supported the increases and was the only member of his party to vote in favor.

Of the 258 members eligible to vote—Speaker Lucien Lamoureux does not and there are five vacancies—118 were not present.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 150; Conservative 71; New Democrat 23; Creditiste, 13; Independent two.

Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen indicated the government may be willing to accept amendments to the bill in committee before it returns for third and final reading.

Besides criticizing of the size of the proposed increases, most members who have spoken have condemned the bill on two other counts:

—It continues giving all members equal tax-free expense allowances without requiring receipts or taking into account the expnse of serving varied ridings;

—It doesn't set a permanent formula for adjusting parliamentary salaries that would take the embarrassing issue out of the hands of the parliamentarians themselves.

The minister said the cabinet had considered including such a formula, but "we did not have the conviction we could devise a formula that would fit the situation."

ST. PIERRE
. . . absence

An independent tribunal didn't seem the answer—many MPs would say today that the government had gone too far in giving such a tribunal the right to fix election boundaries.

Tying parliamentary salaries to an appropriate public service salary had been considered, but there were worries that the government would be accused of giving a generous salary offer to the public service category when MPs wanted a raise.

FIVE MORE DECLINE

But the government was still interested in this proposal, and if the committee members generally felt that there was common ground by which rates for salaries and expenses could be set in the future, the government would "honestly search for that solution."

As for the tax-free expense allowance, all Mr. MacEachen would allow was that it was an arguable point.

Five more members took the pledge Monday that they would not personally accept any pay increase during this session of Parliament.

They were: Mr. Hogarth, T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands), Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk), Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) and John Burton (NDP—Regina East).

They joined six members who had committed themselves likewise in earlier debate.

Mr. Hogarth said he would send any pay increase received before the next election back to the Crown, and pray to God the government wouldn't use it to refit another Bonaventure.

He said he couldn't accept the money and then donate it to charity "without deriving some benefit politically or personally from such a course."

Mr. Rowland was the only other member to say his money would probably go back to government—but to the NDP government in Manitoba, which he thought might use it more to his liking, instead of to the federal treasury.

NOT DEFINITE

Mr. Nowlan and Mr. Goode previously mentioned giving the moneyback, but said they might give it to charity. Most of the others who committed themselves to declining it were either indefinite about their alternative or opted for charity.

Mr. Douglas said he would use his to better serve his riding, perhaps by setting up a constituency office.

Because the mark-up on our money is a lot lower than the mark-up on a lot of other people's money.

In some cases, almost 50% lower.

Our money has a few other features about it, too.

It comes with life insurance at no additional cost.

At Scotiabank, because we have confidence in the future earning power of most people we offer them the money they need...today.

Come in and buy some Scotia money this week.

WINS BRAKING CONTEST

WASHINGTON—Ford's Pinto with disc brakes is ranked first in brake effectiveness among all American-made autos according to consumer information submitted to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.
In the prescribed performance test from 60 m.p.h. without locking the brakes, the Pinto with disc brakes reportedly stops in a maximum of 176 feet.

GOVERNMENT INCENTIVES

Shot in Arm for Quebec Publishers

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's publishing industry received a shot in the arm Monday with an announcement of government measures aimed at protecting the industry.

Although the full implications of government plans were not clear, Cultural Affairs Minister Francois Cloutier said legislation was being prepared which would offer incentives to Quebec publishers and would set up safeguards for book purchasers.

He told a news conference that all government-subsidized institutions will be obliged to purchase their books at stores approved by the cultural affairs department.

"If they don't, the government will reduce or cancel any or all grants to these institutions," he said.

He did not specify what government-subsidized institutions this would refer to.

INSPECTORS WILL CHECK

Under the plan, an inspector from the department will visit bookstores seeking government accreditation. He will present a report to an advisory committee.

Bookstores approved by the committee will be given two years to conform to standards relating to their ownership, administrative structures, location and value of stock.

Only publishing houses incorporated in Quebec and at least 50-per-cent owned by Canadian citizens living in the province, will receive grants.

Mr. Cloutier said the legislation was aimed at stimulating and improving the quality of Quebec French-language works, but that it would apply to English publishing houses in the province as well.

He added the legislation was also aimed at increasing the Canadian content of provincially-operated libraries.

First Graduates

NANAIMO — Fifty students will receive diplomas May 16 during Malaspina College's first convocation ceremony.

Judge Roderick Haig-Brown of Campbell River will deliver the convocation address and Dr. W. R. MacMillan, chairman of the college council, will present diplomas. Randy Ridgets, president of the students association will also speak.

On a recommendation from the faculty, which was approved by the college council, caps and gowns will not be worn.

More than 450 invitations have been sent out, but the public is also invited to attend.

Demonstrators Held

NEW YORK (AP) — Police arrested 77 demonstrators from the militant Jewish Defence League for staging a sit-down that blocked traffic near the Soviet mission to the United Nations. Nineteen of those arrested were under 16. They were charged with delinquency. The others were charged with obstruction of government administration.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Firestone Riding System Service

"This bargain can save a lot more than it costs."

"What will happen if your front wheels are out of alignment? Or if your tires need balancing? Well, your car won't give you the comfort it should. But there's more to worry about than comfort. Or even safety. Your tires will take a terrible licking. Pretty soon, you'll notice that the tread is worn right off in big patches. Tires like that need replacing. That can mean forty or fifty bucks worth of tire mileage down the drain. Maybe more.

"Without proper lubrication, your wheel bearings can suffer and need replacing. So having them cleaned and re-packed with grease could save another fifteen dollars or so.

"Of course, when you talk about a brake adjustment, there's a lot more than money at stake. A lot more."

1. Precision Alignment.

If you've got front wheel problems of caster, camber and toe-in you've got big problems heading your way. Like ruined tires. And maybe damaged suspension components. Our technicians use very precise instruments to make sure your wheels track true and straight.

2. Wheel Balancing.

You may not even know if your wheels are out of balance. But your tires certainly know about it. Every turn of the wheel scuffs off a little more tread. So our Riding System Service specialists can be the best friends your tires ever had.

3. Brake Inspection And Adjustment.

As time goes by, you may not be aware of slowly fading braking power. But if you suddenly need full braking power, you could be in big trouble. For example: a weakened brake line may burst with the sudden surge of fluid. So this inspection and adjustment could be a life saver.

4. Re-packing Front Wheel Bearings.

Your wheel bearings are hidden away where you don't often see them. So there's a good chance they are being gradually ruined by dried out or caked lubricant. Our technicians carefully wash the bearing races in a special cleaning fluid. Inspect them for signs of failure. And re-pack them with a top quality grease. Finally, we road test your car.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Sun Canadian

Expanded capacity by means of looping 60 miles of its Sarnia-Toronto products pipeline is planned by Sun Canadian Pipe Line Co. Ltd.

At a cost of $4.7 million, the company will install new 12-inch pipe, a new compressor station and increase pumping capacity of four existing stations.

Interprovincial

Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. reports net earnings for the first quarter of this year of $8.59 million or 34 cents a share; compared with $8.68 million (34 cents) for the period in 1970.

Revenue for the quarter totalled $37 million, down slightly from $37.28 million last year.

Maple Leaf

Consolidated net earnings of Maple Leaf Mills Ltd. of $300,000 or 17 cents a common share for the quarter ended March 31 compare with $330,000 (19 cents) for the same period last year. Consolidated revenue was $49 million against $46.57 million.

First-quarter results are not indicative of anticipated performance this year, said Robert G. Dale, president and chief executive officer.

Previously reported net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 were $2.22 million $1.33) compared with $2.84 million ($.71) in 1969. There were no extraordinary items applicable to 1970 whereas in 1969 they reduced earnings to $2.55 million ($5.53).

GMC

The directors of General Motors Corp. have declared a regular dividend of 85 cents a share of common stock.

It was the fifth straight 85-cent quarterly dividend by GM.

The directors also declared a $1.25 dividend for $5 series preferred stock.

Kaiser

Kaiser Resources Ltd. has named native Albertan Lorne H. Hunter as general mining superintendent at its operations near Sparwood. He will be responsible for surface mining, mine engineering and mine geology.

Hunter, born in Drumheller and a graduate of the University of Alaska, was employed at Kaiser's Eagle Mountain mine in California, and most recently was assistant manager at central B.C. operations of Bethlehem Copper Ltd.

Crownex

Vancouver-based Crownex International Ltd., operator of the former Cowichan Copper mine at Jordan River, says it has renegotiated a development deal with Pechiney Development Ltd. and Aumas Fersusson Wild Ltd. to bring the mine back into production as soon as possible.

It means Pechiney will be able to raise its interest in the property from 50 per cent to 60 per cent, leaving Crownex with 40 per cent. Pechiney may choose one of several ways to realize its interest, but it will receive 100 per cent of cash flow until $1.75 million of advances are recovered, excluding its initial $500,000, of which $400,000 has been spent.

U.S. Steel

Income for U.S. Steel Corp. last year dropped to $147.5 million, a return on sales of only 3 per cent.

U.S. Steel revenues from sales reached a record high of $4.9 billion in 1970, but income fell because of rising costs in all areas, without offsetting increases in productivity.

Revenues for the first quarter of 1971 were $1.17 billion while income was $40.7 million or 75 cents a share.

Morgan

Morgan Adhesives Co., of Cleveland, in its first report as a public company, shows net income of $1.85 million (80 cents a share) compared with $1.63 million (73 cents) in 1969.

The maker of pressure-sensitive adhesives, with a factory in Toronto, in Brussels and in San Carlos, Calif., besides its home base in Stow, Ohio, reports sales of $37.9 million ($34 million) and total income of $38 million ($34.1 million)

Retained earnings rose from $6.56 million to $8.38 million, reported at the end of the year.

Permo

Permo Gas and Oil Ltd. went from a loss of $108,853 to earnings of $9,266 during the six months ended Feb. 28 compared with the previous year.

The increase was due to lower exploration costs and fewer abandonments by the Calgary company.

Continental

New Continental Oil Co. of Canada Ltd. earned $63,260 during the six months ended Feb. 28, compared with a loss of $22,015 a year earlier.

The previous loss was due mostly to writeoffs of unproductive natural gas and petroleum interests. Exploration and carrying costs were also down.

Gibbex

Stripping, trenching and sampling of its McLeese Lake property is under way following completion of an induced polarization survey that showed gratifying results, reports Gibbex Mines Ltd.

Several major Canadian mining companies have examined the property and an exploration agreement may be forthcoming, said Robert A. Mathhews, president.

Argentina Devalues Peso

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter)—The Argentine central bank has devalued the peso by 1.4 per cent setting the new parity at 4.12 pesos to the United States dollar.

It is the second time the peso has been devalued in less than a month in line with the policy adopted by Economy Minister Aldo Ferrer, who on April 5 set the parity at 4.04 pesos to the dollar.

Until then the dollar had been quoted at 4.00 pesos, the rate set following a massive 12.5—per cent devaluation on June 18.

COAL PRODUCTION UP 57.5 PER CENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Coal production in March this year amounted to 1.9 million tons, 57.5 per cent more than the 1.2 million tons produced in March last year.

Dominion Bureau of Stastics said today imports of coal dropped to 92,971 tons in March from 117,350 tons in March 1970.

Total coal production for the first three months this year reached 5.5 million tons, well ahead of the 3.4 million produced in the first three months of 1970. This year's three-month import figures are also down at 239,666 tons from 246,641 during the first three months last year.

U.S. College 'Grads' Hold Key to Cup Final

BILL WALKER

Meanwhile, it's official. Victoria has received the coup de grace from Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball president Bob Lacoursiere of Saskatoon. The Centennials are dead. It was neatly done. But the stench will linger on.

You know the story, or should.

It was last summer, it all began. The winner of the Canadian baseball championships was to go to Columbia this summer for the Pan-American Games. The winning province would supply the nucleus, and the management of the club.

In the interim, last fall, the world baseball championships were scheduled, also in Colombia. Canada was invited, accepted, and the Centennials were on their way.

This was an unfortunate decision. Probably a mistake. Because the team didn't do at all well, and wasn't a true representative side either. All of which obviously led to what has more recently transpired.

For this winter, about 3½ months ago, there were unmistakeable signs out of Saskatoon that all was not right within the CFAB. The first official inking came in a letter to Pan-American baseball director Gar Taylor here, from Lacoursiere, suggesting that as he considered the Centennials weren't good enough to compete in the Pan-Am Games, he would see to it that they didnt. This was well publicized at the time. But no matter. Few were interested.

●

There followed the usual charges, and counter charges, by officials, and players. Besides being bitter, some were almost libellous. Finally, Centennial team manager Bob Lumley resigned.

As Pan-Am director for baseball, Taylor then appointed Gerry Parker and Ian Gray to take over the club. Their names were submitted to the official Pan-Am committee. Meanwhile, Lacoursiere, at Taylor's invitation, came to Victoria to check on details, and also to discuss arrangements for the Canadian senior baseball championships scheduled here in August.

He met Parker and Gray, seemingly approved of Taylor's choice, then departed. But all wasn't as rosy as it appeared on the surface. For soon after arriving back in Saskatoon, Lacoursiere informed Taylor that not only had he selected two other people to run the Pan-Am team, but also that the Canadian senior championships might be cancelled. A junior tournament was being planned.

Not only had he openly refuted Taylor, but he didn't even have the decency to inform Parker and Gray they were no longer being considered either.

There was yet another dictum by executive order. An all-star team would represent Canada with a minimum of five players from B.C., and a one week training camp would be held before departure. The Centennials as a team had been displaced.

●

Around this time, the feathers hit the fan, the one in the office of Pan-Am director Bob Osborne in Vancouver. Osborne quickly recognized the signs of discord. He immediately suspended baseball, and told Lacoursiere and Taylor to put their house in order or forget baseball at the Pan-Am games. We can use the plane space for other athletes, he said.

That's when Lacoursiere and Taylor met again, head-on, and with Osborne as the moderator.

It was no contest. Taylor had never encountered such a clever opponent. He was quickly rendered helpless in the infighting. He heard stories he had never heard before. Some he said didn't even border on the truth. Still, he slugged it out.

But finally, when Lacoursiere flatly refused to rescind the CFAB executive decision, Taylor took the only action left open to him. Rightly, or wrongly, he backed off. He relinquished B.C.'s rights to form the nucleus of the Pan-Am team. "For the good of baseball," he explained. If he had said "no," baseball would have been struck off the list.

Osborne thanked him, and baseball eventually was reinstated.

Precise details of all the finagling are long, involved, and sickening. They are difficult to adequately expain too. Suffice to say that B.C. and the Centennials were shafted.

It is not only that Lacoursiere rigged everything to further his own ends, as he charged Taylor with doing, but he also didn't always tell all the truth, either. Taylor made this particular charge in a six-page, single-space letter to CFAB directors this week in explaining the B.C. position.

Sure, Lacoursiere was only doing his job, and perhaps all the facts aren't out. But even if he didn't appreciate the fact that B.C. had the right to form, and administer, the Pan-Am team selection, he never did even attempt to act in a co-operative manner to correct any misunderstandings.

And though it may not be wholly true that members of the Pan-Am team will have to genuflect in his presence, there is a certain revernce attached to his position. At least he can dispense patronage. Besides, by his very actions, he has hurt many innocent people.

All this helps to make him easy to dislike.

Oh, yes, that junior baseball tournament that will replace the senior championships originally scheduled here because federal funds aren't available for both events?

That's in Saskatchewan. It's Homecoming Year.

Wouldn't you know it?

CHICAGO (CP) — Michigan Tech and Cornell University in the Stanley Cup final starting tonight?

If goaltending is a decisive factor, then the outcome of the best-of-seven final between Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens could well rest with graduates of one school or the other.

Tony Esposito, the Michigan Tech grad who had a record 15 shutouts in his rookie National Hockey League season last year, has played in all 11 playoff games this season for Chicago.

He allowed only 22 goals, recorded one shutout, winning eight and losing three for a 1.86 goals-against average in the Black Hawks' four-game quarter-final sweep of Philadelphia Flyers and seven-game semi-final with New York Rangers.

Ken Dryden, a Cornell grad and now part-time law student at Montreal's McGill University, appeared in only six games with the Canadiens late in the season.

HANDLES ALL PLAYOFFS

However, he has appeared in all 13 Montreal playoff games, including eight wins. He allowed 42 goals for a 3.31 average in the playoffs plus two of them into empty nets.

While Esposito skated with the Black Hawks Monday to unwind from the tension-filled 4-2 win Sunday to end the seven-game set with New York, Dryden was undergoing tension of a different kind.

The quiet, reserved Montreal goaltender was kept busy with the rest of his team-mates on their flight from Montreal, signing autographs for a flock of passengers aboard the Boeing 747 Air France jumbo jet that brought the team here.

While Esposito, a former Canadien, has experience against his former team-mates over the last two seasons, Dryden has faced the Hawks but once, a 2-1 victory here March 28.

"I've no preference," he replied when asked by reporters after Montreal's six-game semi-final with Minnesota North Stars whether he'd prefer Chicago or New York in the final.

"I've met them both in the short time I was here before the playoffs." He was in the Montreal goal in a 7-2 win at home against the Rangers.

HE WAS NERVOUS

Esposito, almost as reticent as Dryden, admitted he was nervous against the Rangers Sunday and likely will have the pressure built up again by game time tomorrow.

"You've got to be nervous out there," Esposito said. "I'm sure Eddie Giacomin (New York goalie) was just as nervous as I was.

"If you weren't nervous in a situation like that, you'd be too stupid to realize what was at stake."

Both clubs have doubtful starters for tonight's game.

Chicago's Pit Martin, who aggravated a knee injury early in Sunday's game when he and Ranger defenceman Tim Horton collided, and later when he was upended by Dave Balon, is listed as doubtful.

Rugged John Ferguson made the trip to Chicago but the hip injury he suffered in the fifth game of the Montreal-Minnesota series is bothering him.

CAMPBELL OUT

In addition to Martin, the Hawks will be without forward Bryan Campbell who missed the entire Ranger series with a throat ailment and lost 12 pounds in hospital.

HAT TRICK, BUT HE'S OUT

Outfielder Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals knocks Philadelphia catcher Tim McCarver from under his hat in collision at home plate in National League baseball game Monday night at Philadelphia. McCarver held on to ball, and Brock, who was shaken up on play, was called out in attempt to score from second base on single by Ted Simmons. Cardinals were nipped 3-2 by Phillies and slipped two games behind division-leading New York Mets. (AP Wirephoto)

FORD EXTENDS STREAK, STOPS FOE IN EIGHTH

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Al Ford of Edmonton retained his Canadian lightweight boxing title and his undefeated professional record when he stopped Leo Noel of Moncton on a technical knockout in the eighth round here Monday night.

Ford, whose professional record now is 39-0, cut Noel's eye in the third round and continued to do damage until Durelle stopped the fight.

Noel started out well in the first two rounds, but began to falter after the third.

Oak Bay Athletes Take Early Lead

Oak Bay grabbed a fast lead Monday night in the high school section of the All-School Relays as the meet staged by Esquimalt Senior High School and Esquimalt Track Club got underway at Centennial Stadium.

Bays finished first and third around runner-up Mount Douglas in the only final of the night — the 4x800-metre mixed relay — to grab an eight-point lead.

Meet-director Ron Bowker termed the first night a success and said about 1,100 athletes took part in 19 events split into senior high, junior high and elementary school divisions.

One final is also scheduled for Wednesday when action resumes at 5:30 p.m. — the junior high mixed relay — as well as heats in 21 events.

All other finals commence at 5 p.m. Thursday and action in the final evening will include some international-calibre athletes competing in invitational events.

Admission on Wednesday will be 25-cents for adults and 10-cents for students while Thursday prices will be 50-cents and 25-cents.

BAKERS START BOXLA SEASON

Defending champion Victoria McDonald's Bread face Matsqui from the lower mainland tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena in the opening game of the B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League season.

All clubs in the eight-team loop play 24 games during the season.

Other teams in the league are Saanich London Boxing Club, New Westminster, Abbotsford, South Vancouver, South Burnaby and Port Coquitlam.

Plate Ump Saves Mets In 'Balk' That Wasn't

By The Associated Press

Chicago Cubs feel the balk that wasn't gave New York Mets a 3-2 victory Monday night on Tommie Agee's pinch single with two out in the 11th inning.

In the only other major league action, Philadelphia Phillies edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

This was the situation when the argument started at Shea Stadium—score 2-2, top of the ninth, bases loaded and Ron Santo, who had driven in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning, at bat.

"No balk," overrules plate umpire Mel Steiner, explaining that he had signalled for time before McGraw started his move.

Santo then watched a third strike and Johnny Callison tapped to first for the third out.

The Mets won it when Jerry Grote, who doubled home their first run in the fourth inning, lashed a two-out double in the 11th, his fourth hit, off loser Holtzman.

SAW HAND UP

"I saw Steiner put his hand up," McGraw said. "That's why I stopped my windup."

McGraw picked up the tridmph and also singled in his only at-bat, giving him two hits in three trips.

In the night's other game, Larry Bowa knocked in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning.

Freed's toss followed a bases-loaded single by Ted Simmons scoring Dal Maxvill and nailed Brock, who was trying to make it from second base. Maxvill's was the Cardinal only run in a 1-1 tie that existed until Bowa's tie-breaking hit in the eighth.

The Cardinals made it close with a run in the ninth on Jim Beauchamp's sacrifice fly before reliever Joe Hoerner killed the rally.

St. Louis	001 000 001	2	7 0
Philadelphia	000 100 02x	3	11 1

Zachary 0-1, Shaw (8) and Simmons; Lersch 2-1, Brandon (9), Hoerner (9) and McCarver.

Chicago	100 000 010 00	2	9 0

Holtzman 0-4, and Breeden; Gelnay, McGraw 3-1, (9) and Grote. Home run: Chicago Williams (6th).

SLATED to make first regular-season appearance tonight in Western Lacrosse Association is Ivan Thompson, who will line up with Victoria Shamrocks against Burrards in schedule-opening game at Vancouver. Star Ontario import is also expected to be in action at Memorial Arena Wednesday (8 p.m.) when Rocks open home campaign against same club.

Rustlers in Lead

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Three unanswered third period goals gave Red Deer, Alta. Rustlers a 6-3 win over Charlottetown Islanders here Monday night in a close-checking opener of the best-of-seven Centennial Cup junior hockey final.

Second Coup by Argos As Greg Barton Signs

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have pulled their second major coup within the last month over a National Football League club with the signing of quarterback Greg Barton to a four-year contract.

The agent for the 25-year-old quarterback had come to a verbal agreement with Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL but Barton flew here from Hawaii Monday and ended months of speculation about where he'd play this fall.

The Canadian Football League club earlier signed all-American Joe Theismann of Notre Dame, who was reported to have had a verbal agreement with Miami Dolphins.

Barton played out his option year with Detroit Lions but remained under contract with them until May 1. In the meantime, the Lions traded him to Philadelphia.

Pete Retzlaff, vice-president and general manager of the Eagles, said he wasn't happy with Barton's actions but said he doubts if the Eagles could do anything legally.

"Any action we take will be through our league office," Retzlaff said Monday night.

Pakistan Collapse Despite Century

WORCESTER, England (Reuter) — Zahir Abbas, 24-year-old bespectacled right-hand batsman, became the first Pakistani to score a century on the cricket tour of England when he hit 110 in the opening match against Worcestershire Monday.

Replying to Worcestershire's 305 for five declared, the Pakistanis collapsed from 211 for three to 241 all out at tea on the second day of the three-day game.

And by the close Worcestershire's second innings had reached 163 for no wicket with their West Indian opener Ron Headley contributing 96 and first-innnings century-maker Glenn Turner of New Zealand hammering 62.

O.C. CRICKET

MONDAY

Yorkshire 93 and 98 for 5; Kent 307.

Hampshire 286 for 5 declared and 55 for 3; Northamptonshire 270 for 7 declared.

Middlesex 303 for 8 declared and 30 for no wicket; Derbyshire 285 for 8 declared.

Surrey 242 and 104 for 2; Essex 245.

Lancashire 130; Gloucestershire 114 for 9. Lancashire won by 36 runs.

HELPING THE RETARDED . . . . . GOAL OF UCT DRIVE

Something Special in Olympics

It appeared as if it might be "Project 1,200," but even before it was launched it had become "Project 500."

The project is an appeal for funds being made by the United Commercial Travelers of Victoria to assist two youngsters who are the first selected from the city to compete in the annual Canadian Special Olympics, for the mentally refarded, in Toronto.

The Travelers estimate the cost of sending Julie Woods, 17, and Buddy Mycock, 16, who will both compete in swimming and track events, to Toronto at $1,200. However, about $700 in donations has been received for the teenagers and the Travelers hope that additional contributions to Project 500 this month will account for the other $500.

Both students at the Dogwood School, Julie and Buddy have trained steadily during the past year to attain standards required to enter the modified events of the Special Olympics, scheduled this year on June 9, 10, and 11 and expected to be contested by about 1,500 Canadians.

Project 500 is the first phase of the Special Olympics operation organized by the Victoria council of the ACT, and the only one for which the public will be asked for donations.

The second phase calls for the young Victorians involved to raise future funds through displays and other activities.

There will be no administrative costs connected with the current funds drive and any surplus will be held in a sports fund to assist Victoria's future Special Olympics candidates. Those wishing to submit donations should make them payable to the UCT Special Olympics Fund and send them to United Commercial Travelers, P.O. Box 1111, Victoria.

The United Commercial Travelers of America has as an international project, assistance to the Canadian Mentally Retarded Association. The Victoria UCT council has been able to help the local association, particularly the Winnifred Clarke Centre and the Dogwood School, by improving facilities used to educate and train the mentally retarded.

Many teachers are convinced that sports activities can play important roles in development of retardeds, enabling some of them to attain unexpected degrees of confidence and self-reliance.

"Our aim is to help these people help themselves," King said, "and we are convinced that sport is a valuable training aid.

"These two young people are going to be the first of many from this area who will be going to the Special Olympics."

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Putters worked for some, but not for others in Sunday's Times Vancouver Island Open golf battles at Glen Meadows.

Rick Kent hit only four of 18 greens. But he chipped well enough and needed only 25 putts to beat Bob Hunt and claim one of the eight quarter-final spots.

But putters misbehaved at crucial times for Dave McCall, Ron Howard and Jim Girard. As a result, they won't be around for next Sunday's matches at Gorge Vale.

The 19-year-old Girard had a chance to put the boot to favored Bill Wakeham. The Cedar Hill youth feels the turning point of his match was the fifth hole.

Girard was one up at the time, hit the par-four fifth in the regulation two shots. Then he four-putted! Wakeham won two of the next three holes to go two up, but Girard finally settled down to force his seasoned rival to the 18th.

McCall came within an ace of upsetting Norm Boden. They were all square after 16 holes but the 20-year-old McCall putted the 17th to go one down.

On the 18th, McCall needed a four-foot putt for a win that would have forced extra holes. But Dave missed the tricky little effort and Boden still has his hopes of winning the Island Open for a third time.

Both hit good drives on the second extra hole, a 373-yard, par-four job. McMurran missed the green with his approach while Howard hit a fine shot.

McMurran chipped up very well, and it was Howard's turn to putt. Ron had a good birdie but, inexplicably, overpowered his putt. The ball rolled off the green and almost into the water in the ditch at the back of the green. Howard had to chip back, and putt again. He finally conceded.

There has been considerable friction in Vancouver because of a conflict in dates of the Vancouver City match-play final and the Payless Classic in Eugene.

The problem has been solved for all but two pros.

The Vancouver final is scheduled for May 16, and the $20,000 Payless affair runs May 13-16. Vancouver pros who like to play in both events didn't appreciate the clash.

Now only one pro won't be able to make it to Eugene, because Marine Drive's Ron Willey and Jack Westover of Lions Golf Centre are headed for an all-pro clash in next Sunday's semi-finals. The other semi-final will match John Russell against Bert Ticehurst in an all-amateur duel.

One of the pros who was bothered by the conflict in dates was unattached Doug Reid. He's planning to tour extensively this summer, and his problem was solved when he was upset by Westover in Sunday's quarter-finals.

In recent years, Uplands had the dominant juniors. Today, they give Uplands a strong intermediate field, but the junior power seems to have shifted back to Gorge Vale.

The Inter-Club League starts May 19, and Gorge Vale will have to be considered a serious contender with those good juniors waiting in the wings to fill in when senior weaknesses show.

At least eight of Gorge Vale's junior membership are down to six handicaps, or better. They include Bob Beauchemin (3), Rob Ferguson (3), Don Marsden (4), Ray Seymour (5), Gary Ferguson (5), Jeff Jones (5), John Phillion (6) and Grant Milliken (6).

Fantastic Excitement As Arsenal Wins Title

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal defeated Tottenham Hotspur, 1-0, with a goal two minutes from time Monday night to win the English League soccer championship.

Ray Kennedy scored the goal amid scenes of fantastic excitement at Tottenham's White Hart Lane stadium, which was jammed with 60,000 fans.

Arsenal finished the season one point ahead of Leeds — 65 points from 42 games, compared to Leeds' 64.

Arsenal won the title for the first time since 1953. It will play in the European Cup of Champions next season for the first time.

With two minutes left, Arsenal had a 70-29 goals record and a goal average of 2.41, while Leeds' record of 72-30 gave it an average of 2.40.

Then George Graham and George Armstrong moved down the Arsenal right wing and Graham sent the ball across for Kennedy to sweep it into the net.

In other games Monday, Southend and Lincoln played to a 1-1, fourth division draw while Hearts of Midlothian edged Wolverhampton, 1-0, but lost, 2-3, on aggregate in the Texaco Cup final.

Wilkin Pitches Shutout

Brian Grexton's two-run homer in the first inning and the five-hit pitching of Barry Wilkin paced Seaboard Construction to a 4-0 shutout over Strathcona Hotel in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Monday at Central Park.

Seaboard gained another run in the second inning when Pete Isaacson came in on a wild pitch and added another unearned run in the third to close out scoring.

It was the first victory of the season for Seaboard, who opened its season with a 6-5 loss to Bate Construction on Sunday.

Gorge Takes Team Trophy

DUNCAN — Shirley Naysmith of Victoria's Gorge Vale carded the low gross score in the Cowichan Golf and Country Club women's field day on Sunday.

Gregory Blast Aids Langford

Langford Drywall nipped Sooke Merchants 4-3 at Sooke Athletic Park and Colwood Inn blasted William Head 17-1 at Heywood Avenue Park in Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League action Monday night.

First baseman Ken Gregory connected for a two-run homer in the third inning and Langford collected two unearned runs in the eighth for the victory.

Catcher Eric Walker led Sooke batters with a two-run double in the third.

Don Shaw hurled a three-hitter for the winning Colwood crew but Tom Canfield ruined his chances for a shutout by hitting a run-scoring single in the fifth inning.

Few Jockeys On Entry List

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — The threat of a jockey's strike grew stronger Monday when entry lists for Wednesday's nine-race thoroughbred card showed only six horses had riders named.

The jockeys last week announced their intention to stop riding Wednesday if their demands for pay increases are not met.

The Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, comprising owners and trainers who pay jockeys' fees, has said it cannot agree to the riders' demands until it has reached a new agreement with the Jockey Club Ltd. on purses.

Sister, Brother Win Junior Ski Contests

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo brother-sister pair of Tara and Frank Ney captured both tiles in the combined Centennial and Sno-birds Ski Club races Sunday at Green Mountain.

Dionne's Tallies Help Tie Series

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Marcel Dionne scored four goals Monday night to lead St. Catherines Black Hawks to an 8-3 win over Quebec Remparts that tied the best-of-seven Richardson Trophy playoff series at one game each.

Third and fourth games of the junior "A" series will be played in Quebec City Friday and Saturday nights, with the fifth here next Monday.

BENNETT'S SONS WON'T GET OKAY FOR PROJECT

KAMLOOPS, (CP) — The provincial highways department says it will not approve any commercial development on some land in South Kamloops in which Premier Bennett's two sons hold an interest.

In a letter to city council, the highways department says no commercial zoning will be approved within half a mile of the Springhill Interchange on a Kamloops bypass now under construction that will become part of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Within this radius is 68 acres owned by Springhill Holdings Limited. William and Russell Bennett own one-third of Springhill Holdings.

Also affected is 30 acres owned by Southwest Estates Ltd. which planned to start work next month on a $6.7 million commercial and residential development. The highways department says it won't grant access to the new bypass from the Southwest development.

Pat Stroulger of Kamloops, a major shareholder in both Springhill and Southwest, says development of both properties will be held up unless the city succeeds in negotiations with the highways department. He says he may take court action if the city fails to have the development curbs lifted.

Mediator Named For Hydro Dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mediator Clark Gilmour was appointed Monday to deal with a contract dispute between British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority and the 2,000-member International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258.

Talks halted last week when Hydro refused to present union negotiators with a counter-proposal. The union's original demand was for 29½-per-cent wage increase in two years.

The union has voted to strike but has yet to serve the required 72-hour strike notice. It cannot legally strike before the notice expires or before the mediator has handed in his report.

Meanwhile, negotiations between Hydro and two other unions are continuing. These talks involve 200 Pacific Stage Lines bus drivers and about 2,000 office employees.

Baptists To Meet

The 74th annual Convention of Baptist Churches of British Columbia will be held at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road, from Wednesday to Friday.

Moderator of the convention is Rev. Gordon Pousett and the convention theme is The Opportunity that Awaits Us.

The speakers will include Dr. Harrry Renfree, executive minister of the Baptist Union of Western Canada, Rev. Lloyd Pierce, area minister of B.C., and Eric and Merle MacKenzie, missionaries on furlough from Africa.

Running concurrently with the general convention will be the 57th annual convention of Baptist Women of B.C. President Mrs. W. G. Davies will head the one-day women's convention.

Contract Approved

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg city council Monday approved a wage contract with the Canadian Union of Public Employees giving about 3,500 city employees a 19-per-cent wage increase over two years. The wage increase is retroactive to Jan. 1 and consists of five per cent increases every six months in 1972. The union had asked for a 30-per-cent increase over two years.

Search Continues

EDMONTON (CP) — Police are still searching for eight boys who escaped from a juvenile detention centre after locking a guard in a store room. The boys, armed with steel bedposts, had been trailed by a city police dog to a stockyard in the northwest section of the city where they apparently scattered.

★ ★ ★

Youngster Held

SWAN RIVER, Man. (CP) — A 13-year-old boy was in custody Monday as the investigation continued into a fire Saturday on the Birch River Indian reserve which killed five children and sent four to hospital. Police said the fire appeared to have started when a match was thrown on spilled gasoline after children were sniffing gas fumes from plastic bags.

Manhunt Resumes

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — About 30 members of the RCMP have resumed a search that started six months ago in heavy bush country for the man wanted in the slaying of two RCMP officers. The search for Stanley Wilfred Robertson, 40, started in the woods surrounding the small farming community of MacDowall, Sask., 25 miles south of Prince Albert.

Coffins Criticized

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Coffins supplied by the federal government to poor Indians are so shoddy that the bottoms have fallen out when they were used for heavy persons, says a delegate to the annual convention of the B.C. Indian Homemaker's Association convention. Celena John said the $150 coffins are made of hardboard and have caused so much embarrassment that Indians on northern B.C. reserves have been building their own or contributing money to buy better ones for their poor.

THE WEATHER

It was generally cloudy along the north coast overnight. Inland areas of the province were mainly clear but patchy cloudiness associated with a weakening Pacific cold front produced some showers. Price Curb Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is ready to renew for a year President Nixon's authority to impose price, wage and rent controls—power some Democrats contend he should be using extensively to battle inflation and unemployment.

The Senate passed 67 to 4 Monday a bill extending the authority to April 30, 1972.

The House of Representatives voted March 10 for a two-year extension.

However, Nixon used the powers in March in attacking rising costs in the construction industry, and asked for a two-year extension of the authority.

Car-Makers Go to Court

DETROIT (AP) — Three major auto-makers have gone to court to block the federal government's safety regulation designed to require air bags or similar restraints on all cars in the next few years.

Ford, Chrysler and American Motors filed separate petitions in the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio. Chrysler filed its suit Friday, the other two companies filed Monday.

Ford said it supports the objective of the regulation—to provide interior protection for car occupants.

"However, we believe that the standard in its present form has serious legal and other deficiencies," said Wright Tisdale, vice-president and general counsel for Ford.

Coverage of Kent State Deaths Wins Pulitzer Prize for Paper

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Pulitzer prizes have been awarded for coverage of the Kent State University campus tragedy in which Ohio National Guard troops killed four students and wounded nine others a year ago today.

The staff of the Akron, Ohio, Beacon Journal won the general local reporting award Monday for its work in piecing together the story of the shootings under deadline pressure.

In the arts, the 1971 prize for drama went to Paul Zindel's The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds—the second year in a row an off-Broadway play won the award.

For the first time since 1964 no fiction prize was awarded.

BACKGROUND STORY WINS

The prize for national reporting went to Lucinda Franks, 24, and Thomas Powers, 30, of United Press International for their background exploration of Diana Oughton, 28, killed in the explosion of a bomb factory in a Greenwich Village townhouse in New York.

The prize for public service by a newspaper went to the Winston-Salem, N.C., Journal and Sentinel for their coverage of environmental problems including a successful fight against a proposed strip mining operation that would have blighted the beauty of northwestern North Carolina.

The prize for international reporting went to Jimmie Lee Hoagland, 31, of the Washington Post for reporting on South Africa's apartheid system.

William Jones, 31, of the Chicago Tribune, won the prize for special local reporting for an investigative series that exposed payoffs to police in the private ambulance industry.

Paul Conrad was at work at the Los Angeles Times when he learned he had won his second Pulitzer Prize in seven years for cartooning. He first won in 1964 while working for the Denver Post.

SUBMITS 10 CARTOONS

Conrad, 47, submitted 10 cartoons, one a particularly biting comment on the My Lai massacre.

The feature photography prize went to Jack Dykinga, 28, of The Chicago Sun-Times, for pictures of children in the Lincoln and Dixon state school for the retarded in Illinois.

William A. Caldwell, 64, won the prize for commentary for his daily column on local affairs in The Record of Hackensack, N.J.

Horace G. Davis Jr. of the Gainesville, Fla., Sun won the award for editorial writing for more than 30 editorials in the newspaper's campaign in support of desegregation of Florida schools.

The award for criticism was won by Harold C. Schonberg, 55, senior music critic for the New York Times for the last 10 years.

The trustees of Columbia University awarded the 55th annual Pulitzer prizes recommendation of an advisory board. They were endowed by the late Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and publisher of the old New York World, in a bequest to the university. He died in 1911.

ROOSEVELT BOOK WINS

Other 1971 awards in the field of arts and letters included:

History—Roosevelt: The Soldier of Freedom, by James MacGregor Burns, 52. It is the second volume of a political biography of Franklin Delano Roosevelt by the Williams College professor of government.

Biography—Robert Frost: The Years of Triumph, 1915-1938, by Lawrence R. Thompson, 65, who became Frost's companion and confident in 1939 with the understanding that his biography would not be published during the poet's lifetime.

General non-fiction—The Rising Sun, by John Toland, 58, the story of Japan during the Second World War.

Music—Synchronisms No. 6 for Piano and Electronic Sound, by Mario Davidovskyl, 36, composer and lecturer in music at Columbia University.

Be-In Melee Exaggerated Says Mayor

EDMONTON (CP) Mayor Ivor Dent said Monday an interim report by a city commissioner investigating a weekend be-in indicates that claims about incidents were exaggerated.

"Damage was not as excessive as earlier reported," the mayor said after receiving the report from Parks Commissioner George Hughes.

Mayor Dent also criticized the news media for a "lack of responsibility" in reporting the event, attended by about 1,500 youths.

The be-in, organized by the Youth International Party, or Yippies, turned into a gathering to hear rock music.

A teach-in and an appearance by Yippie leader Jerry Rubin of the United States did not materialize.

Mayor Dent said in an interview he expects to receive soon a full report from Mr. Hughes.

ROCKS THROWN

The incidents occurred about midnight Sunday when a line of policemen in helmets and carrying riot sticks swept through the park attempting to evict about 100 stragglers.

Police said almost all the youths left without resistance, but a few started throwing rocks and bottles and broke windows in cars and buildings outside the park.

Organizers had advertised the be-in as a two-day event and encouraged people to spend Saturday night in the park.

The permit to use the park Saturday expired at 9 p.m. Police turned off electrical power at that time, stopping the music coming through amplifiers and loud speakers.

STAY IN PARK

Determined to continue, many youths stayed in the park all night camping around fires, drinking liquor and improvising their own music.

Five people were charged with offences ranging from causing a disturbance to assaulting a police officer. Among those charged was George Anthony McMenemy, 18, of Deep River, Ont., sentenced Monday to 30 days after he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by cursing and shouting obscenities at police who were attempting to clear the park Sunday night.

TULIPS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

ROMFORD, England (UPI) — The 60,000 tulips in Raphael Park are just about ready to bloom 11 days before the annual tulip festival.

A town committee said it will spray the plants with latex in an attempt to slow down their flowering.

The Loyal Royal Crush

Campus of Suspicion

Lack of Communication Called Main Problem

By STEVE HUME

Both sides in the dispute that has disrupted the University of Victoria campus must be willing to modify their positions and talk with each other before any solution can be reached, the former associate dean of arts and science said Monday.

"There must be a constructive attempt to respond and not to be suspicious of motives," said Dr. Peter Smith, who resigned suddenly from the administration earlier in the spring.

•

The Classics professor, who will return to teaching at the undergraduate level next term, granted the interview to the Times to discuss the reasons behind his abrupt resignation from the administration of president Bruce J. Partridge.

He accused the administration and board of governors of being "insensitive" to students and faculty and out of touch with the academic community.

He also charged that suspicion on the part of the faculty association had been "extreme", although he expressed some sympathy with the organization's goals and arguments.

Smith declined to comment on specific reasons for his resignation because they were "matters of conscience and it wouldn't be right for me to discuss them."

"There has been too much rhetoric all year," he said. "I'm not going to add to it by striking a new pose of my own.

"My attitudes toward the purpose and style of university government were not compatible with the prevailing view."

Smith said he was convinced that the administration and board of governors had been trying to find solutions to the present difficulties.

Governors 'Terribly Isolated' From Academic Community

Lack of communication between the board, the administration and the students constituted a major problem at Uvic, he said.

"It's tempting to sit back and fire salvos at the board — but they are tremendously unselfish men."

•

Smith said the present attitude of the administration upset him because "there has been a reluctance to admit that a problem has existed."

"I wonder if ever over the past two years the president and academic deans have sat down with the Faculty Association executive and discussed the problems of the university.

"I'm implying, of course, that they didn't at any time when I was in office and I think that this applies just as much to the Faculty Association.

He said that on the part of the administration "the insensitivity has consisted of an inability to see what the grievances might be."

Among the administration at Uvic there has been a feeling that "administrators have a higher wisdom," Smith said.

"As an ex-administrator I don't feel that I have any higher wisdom and there is considerable doubt that any of us have a higher wisdom."

He said the existence of a "bureaucratic-hierarchical approach to university administration" led to insensitivity at Uvic.

"This is something I feel quite deeply about.

"I'm very unhappy about the bureaucratic-hierarchical approach. It is not a case of chain of command — the university administration must identify, articulate and fulfill the needs of the academic community.

"When differences arise it must reconcile them. There has clearly been no reconciliation at the University of Victoria."

He said at the mass meeting called by Partridge and attended by 3,000 students there was an hour-and-a-half of "rhetoric from the administration" before the first speaker from the floor was entertained.

"You present a position and say here you are — chip away at it. That's not acceptable."

Smith said a "corporate" business-like approach to the administration of Uvic did not produce a democratic climate.

"I guess I'm a doctrinaire democrat," he said. "I feel that a community has to chart its own course — whether it's right or wrong.

•

"I'm also a pragmatist and I do believe in working flexibly toward solutions and not taking rigid positions."

"Even if there were 40 scheming radicals on campus one must administrate the university in such a way that one can accommodate the 40 scheming radicals."

Smith said he absolutely rejected suggestions "the administration has been sinister or malevolent."

"The most severe criticism that I would have is that they have been unresponsive and dogmatic."

He voiced sympathy and support for the cause of the students during the Uvic upheavals, and said students who were deeply involved in the turmoil had a very good understanding of the situation.

"The students have been trying to tell the administration that they consider undergraduate teaching to be the most important issue and their sincerity has been doubted."

Administrative responses, particularly to student demands with respect to contract and tenure disputes involving 12 faculty members (three of them the cases before the Canadian Association of University Teachers), had led to frustration and anger, he said.

A fast-talking academic conman could fake his way for a few years, Smith said, but if he really wasn't good students would see through his act.

"If an undergraduate teacher can maintain his reputation throughout four or five years while a generation of students has graduated — I think student opinion will be pretty accurate.

"These men at Uvic have not been flashy teachers," he said, "and they have good reputations with the students."

He said his primary interest and objective at Uvic was "to keep the university an undergraduate teaching institution."

"I'm talking about an attitude toward a university."

"This has nothing to do with personalities. It is a dissatisfaction with attitudes and values."

ONE FACES TRIAL

Stay Ordered In Fraud Case

A stay of proceedings was entered Monday in Victoria provincial court by the Crown in the case of Earl Wilbert Large, 882 Beckwith, charged jointly with his brother on counts of theft and fraud, one of which involves $1 million.

His brother, Walter Frank Large, 4230 Glendenning, through counsel, waived the remainder of his preliminary hearing and Judge William Ostler committed him for trial in a higher court.

Prosecutor Ray Paris told court the attorney-general's department was entering the stay of proceedings. He also disclosed that defence counsel had agreed to waive the rest of the preliminary hearing.

The charges were read against the Larges last August and one count alleges a $1 million fraud. The brothers have been principles of the Victoria-based B.C. public company Datatech Systems Ltd.

A no-publication order was issued by Ostler when the preliminary hearing started late last year. The hearing sat most of eight days in December and another six days in February.

Rest Homes Ready to Take Welfare Offer

The executive of the British Columbia Rest Homes Association has decided to accept a provincial government offer of $174 a patient per month for welfare patients revoking an earlier threat to evict welfare patients.

★ ★ ★

The vice-president of the association, John Hanrahan, said today the executive decision will have to be approved by the membership at a general meeting scheduled for May 12 in Victoria.

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi last week announced a $24-a-month increase in the rate paid by the government to private rest homes, to $174 from $150.

Hanrahan said the executive of the association has decided to accept the new figure as a base rate only and to seek higher payments in further discussions with the government regarding cases involving a greater degree of care.

THE HIGHLY-SPECIALized job I'm about to describe is already taken. But supposing for a moment that it was up for grabs, here in broad outline is what it would require of you.

Lengthy training.

Strict self-discipline and a sense of responsibility. Also the stamina to cope with tightly-scheduled days.

You would be expected to meet people of all sorts, conditions and ranks, to preserve your calm, and to smile even when smiling came hard.

You would be under close and not always inconspicuous surveillance. Part of your job would be to attend an endless succession of functions, at which you would listen to speeches, acknowledge introductions graciously, and maintain an unshakable poise.

On occasion it would be necessary for you to speak in public. The small luxury of being a few minutes late for any engagement would be denied you.

To handle this job successfully, you would be required to spend a considerable amount of time in travel by air, land and sea. At times, particularly while your children were young, this could entail painful and perhaps worrying separations for varying periods.

In theory, your on-the-job expenses would be paid, but on occasion you might be obliged to draw on your personal funds. And except when a too-short holiday offered relief, your job would continue unchanged through the years.

A sinecure? Think well before you answer. My own opinion is that life bestows few occupations more demanding than the one I've sketched.

Here's a health unto Her Majesty—no Centennial visitor more welcome, who conducts her difficult task with dignity and grace! May her visit to this Island bring pleasure along with the weight of duties well-performed.

Others have noted a decrease this spring in the number of garden insects. But the honey-bee I saw clinging to a twig in a dopey condition wasn't necessarily a victim of pesticide. It may have been starving to death.

That possibility was suggested by a bee-keeper who told me how his charges go about their day's foraging.

A bee that has scouted out a good source of nectar will load up and return to the hive. Arrived, it will go into what seems like an aimless dance, but is actually a concise set of directions to other industrious hive dwellers.

In effect, it is telling them that if they fly a beeline on the bearings he's supplying, they'll find good pickings.

Before a worker responds, it takes on a ration of honey to sustain it on the flight. If it misjudges, as my bee perhaps did, it's in trouble.

"What I do when I find a bee in that state," my informant said, "is tumble it into a jar and take it up to the house. Then I dip some liquid honey on the end of a toothpick and offer it to the bee. I treated one that way just the other day. It began to feed on the honey, and in only a few seconds, it was coming round . . . combing itself with its legs and acting much livelier. When I took it outside, it flew off in good shape."

Further hive lore: bees are selective harvesters, and won't waste time trying to coax nectar from blooms not yet in a state to yield it.

"This time of year," said the bee-keeper, "you're likely to find them at work on the maple sprays."

Thus guided, I hunted up a maple. Sure enough, several busy bees of domestic strain were tucking away the nectar yield of its pollen-heavy bloom.

Since none seemed in need of a pick-me-up, I went in and enjoyed a taste of honey myself.

Circus Spectacle Marks Wedding of Clowns

By STEVEN CARTER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Raggedy Jane and Raggedy Robin, two free-lance clowns, were married Saturday in a two-hour circus spectacle of belly dancers, bagpipers, trapeze artist and fire eater inside a Methodist church.

The bride and groom, their faces in white greasepaint and wearing colorful patchwork clown costumes, exchanged vows before an altar line with paper flowers and tassels, while a crowd of about 500 persons, including many wide-eyed children dressed in clown and gypsy costumes, looked on and cheered.

The spectacle, including exotic dancers with live nakes, a Hindu wedding dance, a singing dog, a troupe of female impersonators, plus entertainers in bear, tiger and gorilla outfits. Ringmaster Dana McCarthy introduced the various acts.

One woman, who declined to give her name, said she walked out in "disgust" over "a three-ring circus of sex deviates and misfits."

Raggedy Robin, 23, of San Francisco, whose real name is Robin Smith, said he and his bride, Jane Melody, 19, met about a year ago and had planned the elaborate wedding for six months.

"It was a patchquilt of different things we liked," he said. He directed the gala entertainment portion of the ceremony from the balcony.

"When two clowns get married, you've got to do something that fits your personality," said Jane.

The jammed church was decorated with banners, streamers and multi-colored balloons. Confetti and ribbons rained down on the crowd after each act finished.

Many of the performers were professional acquaintances. The California Clown Troupe came over 400 miles from Southern California to perform on the gaily-decorated stage.

The couple was married in the Progressive Glide Memorial Church by Bishop Michael-Francis Itkin of the Evangelical Catholic Church.

The couple — Robin wearing a bright red wig of yarn and Jane a similar one of lavender and pink — marched down the balloon-lined aisle toward the altar behind a parade of entertainers while a college choir sang Age of Aquarius. A live llama preceded the bride and groom.

"Praise them with drums and dances, praise them with cymbals and reeds," said Rev. Itkin.

The bride, a petite blue-eyed girl from Urbana, Ill., who was the first woman to graduate from the Ringling Bros. clown school, wore a patchwork costume of antique lace she made herself.

She said Robin saw a picture of her in costume in a magazine article and wrote saying how much he liked her wig. Soon after, she wrote Robin, the two got together, and performed together on the West Coast.

Students Test Roman Recipes

By DEE WEDEMEYER

NEW YORK (AP) — Cato recommended libum bread, Apicius was a firm believer in Devil's dung, Seneca disapproved of anything but plain unadorned food and the plebian Romans may have been the first to discover soul food.

Those are among the things that eight students at New York University learned in a one-month "mini-seminar" on the art of ancient Roman cooking.

They've also learned how to peel a taro, how to bake libum, how to cook on laurel leaves, and how to improvise liquamen, a Roman equivalent of Worcestershire sauce made from putrified fish scraps.

Most of the recipes of Apicius, a first-century AD Roman gourmet who committed suicide after spending his fortune on feasts, have no measurements to the students had to use guesswork.

They also had to scour grocery stores and pharmacies for modern-day equivalents of ancient spices and foodstuffs. Taro, a root plant, was easy because it is being grown in Puerto Rico under the name malanga. Devil's dung, or asafoetida, was used in the U.S. as late as the 1900s as a charm to ward off disease.

An anchovy sauce was substituted for the liquamen.

Most of the students' previous culinary achievements had been limited to eggs but they successfully attempted duck in a sauce of honey, chopped pigs' feet and taro, mussels in a sea urchin sauce, stuffed dates and the libum bread.

For source books the students used Apicius' cookbook and the writings of such famous Romans as Cato, Pliny and Seneca. They received one credit for the course.

The course instructor, Dr. Phyllis Bober, believes the Apician recipes may have been the predecessor for many of today's finest French sauces because Marie de Medici took Italian chefs and recipes to France with her when she married Henry II.

Geniuses Begin Young

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — Geniuses are made, not born, and can be developed from the age of two, says a Soviet expert.

Writing in Courier, an organ of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Dr. Boris Nikitin said there is evidence that by the age of three "a human being has covered half his mental development."

"Children of pre-school age have great opportunities to solve vital new problems," Nikitin said. "They have plenty of free time to do this. That is why there is often an early flowing of their creative abilities."

But by the time they go to school, what is new and incomprehensible is always explained to them, checking and even extinguishing their creative abilities, he added.

Nikitin supported his "catch them young" thesis by reporting that aftr the age of about eight, even speech is not easily learned.

He rejected a number of common suppositions about the origins of genius. One is that geniuses have large brains. Louis Pasteur, famous French scientist, made some of his greatest discoveries after half of his brain was affected by a stroke, Nikitin said.

Inventory Anticipates Disaster

WINNIPEG (CP) — As you do the spring cleaning this year, it's a good idea to make a room-by-room inventory, says Susan Gadd, consumer information specialist for the Manitoba agriculture department.

"Most of us would have a great deal of difficulty in recalling all our household contents were we to be hit by disaster," she says.

An inventory helps you to decide on the proper type of insurance coverage as well as aiding in claim settlements after fire or theft, she says. It also is a useful tool to help the family decide on household needs.

Miss Gadd suggests a room-by-room list, giving such information as article, date of purchase, description, cost and, where applicable, serial numbers. The information can be kept on file cards or in notebooks — but she recommends two copies, with one kept outside the home in a safe place, such as a safety deposit box.

Make sure the list is complete, she adds, and don't forget articles stored in closets, trunks or the garage.

Long Chat With Queen Recalled

"She really hasn't changed that much since I talked to her in Golden in 1951," said Mrs. Montague Farrell, 3315 Firerest Place.

She was one of a family group who had been waiting since 5 p.m. in a ringside position, hoping Her Majesty would stop to chat as she left the Britannia for city hall.

The Queen walked quickly to the car without chatting to anyone in the crowd, but Mrs. Farrell was glad to have had a close look at her again.

Mrs. Farrell reminisced about the earlier visit.

"We had a wonderful chat for 20 minutes. It was an unscheduled stop on the tour and by chance I was at the station, delivering bread from our bakery, when the royal train stopped.

"The Queen chatted easily, and for 20 minutes we talked about our children and families."

Her daughter, Pamela Ann, was one of the few he talked to when the official party returned to the Britannia.

"We had a great chat," Pameda said.

"I just held out my hand and he stopped to talk. I said 'Hello, Sir,' then he asked where I was from and what I did.

"When I said I went to school, he asked when I would finish, I said this May, and he said 'If you complete all your studies, of course,' then smiled and walked on."

Possibly the youngest citizen to meet the prime minister was Mrs. Farrell's granddaughter, Monta Musgrave.

Monta was held on the ledge of the fence by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Musgrave. Trudeau spotted the little blonde girl in her hand-made mauve dress and coat with matching bonnet, and stopped briefly. Monta solemnly shook hands.

Margaret Manages Hat Trick

One woman in the official party accompaning the Queen made a slight change in her wardrobe for welcoming ceremonies at Centennial Square.

As she got into an open car for the drive to City Hall she pulled a switch, quickly tying a polka-dotted kerchief matching her dress, over her hair in gypsy style.

The quick change was accomplished by tying it at the back of her head just as the car moved off.

She switched back to the large hat for the welcoming ceremonies, but en route she aroused the disapproval of one bystander.

A woman with a strong Scots accent was scandalized:

"That may be all very well for the North Shore Racquet Club but not for royalty!"

'Dead' Reporter Returns

"It's weird reading these things, really weird," she said.

Miss Webb, 28, New Zealand-born chief of the United Press International Bureau in Phnom Penh, was released by the Viet Cong about 40 miles southwest the Cambodian capital before dawn Saturday after 23 days in Communist captivity.

She had been believed dead for about 10 days prior to her release because two Cambodian officers had reported finding, identifying and cremating her body along the highway near the point where she disappeared during the rout of a Cambodian paratroop battalion April 7.

Miss Webb smiled at a clipping from a New York newspaper headlined "body of girl reported found in Cambodia," propped her sore feet on a deck chair and remarked, "I don't want to do any more walking for a long, long time."

"Right nown I'm tired," she said." I want to sit around here for a couple of days and then go see my family in Sydney."

Miss Webb's feet were badly blistered by two nights of steady walking. Shod only in a pair of rubber shower clogs, she trudged along jungle trails from a detention camp in which she and five other correspondents and their drivers and interpreters were held to the point where she was turned loose.

Released with her were Toshiichi Suzuki, correspondent of the Japanese Nihon Denpa News Agency, and four Cambodians — her own driver-interpreter, Chhim Sarath, photographers Tea Kim Heang and Ing charoen, and Suzuki's driver, Kong Vorn.

As she sat at the pool a messenger delivered to her a telegram from Australian Prime Minister William McMahon, offering congratulations on behalf of the Australian Government and people on her release.

Still fatigued even after two nights of solid sleep, she talked in a sometimes tremulous, low-pitched voice of life with the Communists in the jungle.

"They called me the English girl," she said of her Vietnamese captors, "and they told me to check my health as soon as I got ack to Phnom Penh because they thought I was very weak."

"I wove myself a bracelet out of creepers and threads from a checkered cotton scarf they gave me. This intrigued the Vietnamese. They kept asking me what it was for, and seemed puzzled that it was merely whimsical. Isn't exactly their line."

Miss Webb said she and the others had been interrogated at length by men who appeared to be fairly high-ranking officers of the "Vietnamese" southwest command and had also been given lengthy propaganda lectures.

But there was no brain-washing or third degree, she said, and when the correspondents asked in turn to interview their captors, the request was granted, apparently with pleasure.

She said the guerfillas were fully co-operative in her interviews with them, and even after they were over, they came back from time to time to see if the newsmen had any more questions to ask.

Miss Webb said she and the others had some narrow escaped from danger, but most of them came in the 22 hours between the time Cambodian paratroopers they were with were routed and the time they stumbled into a Viet Cong bunker about noon the next day. She said they narrowly escaped a number of air strikes and airtillery barrages by government forces.

Shortly after they had been captured and herded into a bunker, she said, "a chap came up v ith a green bag full of something, and I thought it was plastique and they were going to blow us all up in there. We were terrified and we all tried to scramble outo But that wasn't their idea."

Weighty Problem Husbands' Fault

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Men with fat wives, in many cases, have no one to blame but themselves for their spouse's shape, a University of Michigan sociologist said today.

Prof. Richard Stuart, co-author of the forthcoming book on Behavioral Control of Overeating, said the husband who needles and berates his wife for being fat may be the main reason she became and stayed, that way.

In researching his book, Stuart said, he found some men wanted to maintain their wives' extra poundage as a "personal, one-upmanship." Others, he said, believe it keeps the women from becoming promiscuous, while still others find their overweight wives attractive — simply because they are fat.

In helping more than 200 women shed 30 to 40 per cent of their excess weight during the course of a five-year study, Stuart said he found the co-operation and encouragement of husbands, as well as friends and co-workers, essential to his patients' success.

"We don't assume a fat person lacks self control," he said. "We feel his overeating is a consequence of what is presented to him in his environment, particulary the people he is exposed to."

Instead of criticizing his patients for gaining weight, Stuart said he praises them heavily when they lose some.

Stuart said that after he takes inventory of a patient's snack habits, he works out a schedule with her and her husband of when and under what circumstances her eating will take place.

After he compiles his diet, Stuart said, the rest is up to the husband.

"The husband's assistance in managing his wife's eating behavior has been a big factor in the diet's results," he said.

"Men control their wives' weight."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Just Friends

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Jim and I have been dating steadily for three months. Jim is 26, very intelligent, has an excellent job with a good future and is of average looks. He's never been married and neither have I. (I am 22.) People consider me attractive.

It is difficult for me to understand why Jim has never shown any signs of affection toward me. He's never even held my hand, and he's never told me that he cares for me. We are able to talk freely about almost everything. Jim is considerate and courteous. Instead of a good-night kiss, he says, "Stay sweet," or "Keep well," or "I'll see you."

I would very much like to have some affection from him. I think he should have asked to kiss me by now, don't you?

I don't want to seduce him, but this has me wondering. What do you think?—Puzzled.

DEAR PUZZLED: If you can talk with Jim about almost everything, ask him what he sees in you. Don't be surprised if he says you'd make a great sister. An intelligent 26-year-old man doesn't need a roadmap to find his way around.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Jane, has fallen in love with the son of friends of ours. Steve is a fine young man and we are very fond of him. He has finished school and has a good job with a sound future and could easily support Jane now. Not in luxury, but with all the necessities. They have asked for our permission to marry — but they want to marry right now!

Jane has another year of school and we want her to graduate first. In fact, her father insists upon it. Jane says if we give her our blessings to marry now, she promises to finish school after she's married. She has always been an obedient and sensible girl, but she says if we don't give them permission to marry, they will elope.

So far I am on my husband's side. Steve's parents are with the kids and so are many of our friends. They say we are being unreasonable. What do you think? — Jane's Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: You don't say how old "the kids" are. If the "school" Steve has finished is college, and Jane has one more year before she, too, is a college graduate, I think you're being unreasonable.

If it's "high school," I think you're being blackmailed.

DEAR ABBY: Can you please settle an argument between me and my husband? Our supervisor at the office tells us that it is rude to ask anyone who has been ill what was wrong with him. She says if the person volunteers the information, fine, but it is in poor taste to inquire. I say it's all right to ask because it shows your are really interesed, and if they don't want to answer, they don't have to.

I will admit I have seen a couple of people blush when they were asked what was wrong with them. One was a lady who had had a female operation, and the other was man who had had painful rectal surgery.

My husband says the supervisor is right, and she is probably the supervisor and I am working for her because she knows what to say and what not to say. I'd like your opinion.—Willing to Learn.

DEAR WILLING: I vote with your husband.

DEAR ABBY: I love my husband dearly but we have this constant disagreement about leaving our children alone. One is four years old, the other is five months old. My husband sees no reason why we can't leave them alone for one minute. He says that if something is going to happen, it will happen whether someone is here with them or not, and what can a four-year-old and a five-month-old do in the house while we are gone that they don't do when we're around?

When our first child was a tiny infant, I was on the other side of town and had to bicycle home when my husband called to say he had to leave. When I got home my husband had already left and the child was so frightened she was screaming bloody murder!

My husband thinks I am crazy. I think he is heartless. Thanks for any help you can give me.—At Wits End.

DEAR AT: Ask your husband how long he thinks it would take a flash fire to destroy your home and the children trapped in it? That should settle the disagreement.

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old and a college graduate. The man is 48, has six children and is a grandfather. After having a six-year clandestine affair with this man we were caught in an embarrassing situation by two of his grown children.

I persuaded him to leave his handicapped wife and live with me in another state.

I love this man with all my heart, and I know he loves me. But after a year he is lonely for his children and he can't seem to hold a job because of nervousness and depression.

Should I send him back to his wife and children while I am still young enough to look further?—Second Thoughts.

DEAR SECOND: Yes. I think you have both learned that happiness cannot be built on the sorrow of others.

Confidential to Hurt in Anaheim: If you can't go to the wedding wishing them both well, don't go in order to show everyone you aren't at home crying your eyes out. Your bitterness will be apparent, and you'll wish you'd stayed away.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

B.C. Tel Told to Mind Its Own Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — A handful of women representing the Women's Liberation Alliance picketed the British Columbia Telephone Company's head office in downtown Vancouver Friday protesting what they described as "sexist discrimination" in job application and employment procedures.

"B.C. Tel, it's none of your business," was the slogan on one of the placards carried by the six demonstrators, who said their protest resulted from complaints received from a few of the company's 5,000 female employees.

"Menstruation is healthy, not a condition of employment" and similar slogans were directed to a medical questionnaire for female applicants only which asks such questions as: the regularity, duration, and pain during menstrual periods; and the history of pregnancies and miscarriages.

The demonstrators said employees who disagreed with the "medical inquisition" at the time of application and refused to complete the form did not suffer any consequences, but the protestors said the questions were an invasion of privacy and part of a dehumanizing atmosphere.

Company spokesman Colin Patterson, said: "I would think that any application would have these kind of queries."

Lose 10 lbs. in 10 Days on Grapefruit Diet

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. (Special)—This is the revolutionary grapefruit diet that everyone is suddenly talking about. It has made people slim, attractive and feel young again. Literally thousands upon thousands of copies have been passed from hand to hand in factories and offices throughout the U.S.

Word of its success has spread like wildfire. This is the diet that really works. No pills or drugs. We have testimonials in our files reporting on its success. If you follow it exactly, you should lose 10 pounds in 10 days. There will be no weight loss in the first 4 days, but you will suddenly drop 5 pounds on the 5th day. Thereafter you will lose one pound a day until the 10th day. Then you will lose 1½ pounds every two days until you get down to your proper weight. Best of all, there will be no hunger pangs. Now revised and enlarged, this new diet plan lets you partake of foods formerly "forbidden" such as big juicy steaks, roast or fried chicken, rich gravies, spareribs, mayonnaise, lobster swimming in butter, bacon, sausages and scrambled eggs. You can eat until you are full and still lose 10 pounds in the first 10 days plus 1½ pounds every two days thereafter. The secret behind this new "quick weight loss" diet is simple. Fat does not form fat. The grapefruit acts as a catalyst (the "trigger") to start the fat burning process. You eat as much as you want of the permitted foods listed in the diet plan, and still lose unsightly fat and excess body fluids. When the fat and bloat are gone your weight will remain constant. A copy of this very successful diet plan including suggested menus can be obtained by sending $2 to Grapefruit Diet. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. If after diligently trying the diet plan you have not lost 7 pounds in the first 7 days and 1½ pounds every two days thereafter, simply return the diet plan and your $2 will be refunded promptly and without argument. Fill out the coupon, mail it today, and you will receive your diet rush via first class mail. Decide now to regain the trim, attractive figure of your youth, while enjoying hearty breakfasts, lunches and dinners.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Union Seeking Longer Vacations

The B.C. Government Employees' Union is seeking longer vacations for its long-service members.

A brief on fringe benefits presented by the union to the B.C. Civil Service Commission earlier this month says benefits granted by other employers have increased greatly over the last 10 years while those of the provincial government have remained static.

The brief calls for 17 days' vacation after five years' service, 20 days after 10 years, 22 days after 15 years, 25 days after 20 years, and 30 days after 25 years.

Employees of municipal governments and private industry have longer vacations, the brief says.

It also notes that the provincial government refuses to pay shift differential, and presses for an extra 10 cents an hour on afternoon shifts and 15 cents an hour for graveyard.

The brief also seeks implementation of the following features:

- Reduction of the present 40-hour work week without reduction in pay;
- Payment of overtime in cash, at time-and-a-half up to four hours and double time after four hours;
- Payment in cash of all unused sick leave when an employee leaves the service;
- Dirty money of 15 cents an hour extra for employees working with tar, asphalt or weed sprays.

Union headquarters in Vancouver this week is counting ballots of employees who voted last week to accept or reject a 6.6 per cent pay increase handed down earlier this month by the government. The union does not have collective bargaining.

More on Drink Than Books . . .

He made the observation Monday when in Victoria to speak at the British Columbia Centennial Conference on Libraries.

"They're concerned about what the people want in terms of liquor — but they're not prepared to see what they want when it comes to reading."

He pointed out that much more funds are made available to the Liquor Control Commission than the Library Development Commission.

"Because they have no money to speak of the LDC has to meet in the Vancouver Public Library. The LCC were allocated funds to carry out a survey. Why not the LDC?

"The LDC should be given a little mad money to experiment. No LDC should go a year or two without seeing every library in British Columbia — there aren't that many."

Emmott sugested that libraries should consider publicizing what they have to offer and getting into the "mail order business."

"If libraries are starved for funds politicians should reflect the interests of the people they serve.

POOR JOB

"Maybe we've done a poor job of advertising our wares.

"I think libraries could profit by the examples of big companies which, in spite of their large stores, still do a roaring mail order business.

"Why is this? Because they bring out attractive catalogues."

Emmott also suggested that libraries could become more effective by changing their roles.

He suggested that greater regionalization of services could help make such a change.

"I can see the day when you'll be able to go to a library with a few friends, press a button, and see any film you want. That's the sort of thing that would bring people into libraries who normally never go there."

Discuss Urban Affairs

Provincial ministers of municipal affairs will meet in Victoria, Aug. 23 to 25, to discuss plans for a tri-level conference of governments on the subject of urban affairs.

Also on the agenda will be questions raised by the formation of a federal ministry of urban affairs, said Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Campbell is heading a committee looking into the proposed role of the new ministry, how it will relate to other federal departments dealing with municipalities and how the inclusion of municipalities in the federal-provincial conference structure will affect constitutional matters.

He said December is a target date for a conference in which municipalities would realize their aim of representation at the federal-provincial conference table. The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Reeves is representing municipalities in the discussions.

Blackmore Funeral Wednesday

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — A funeral service will be held Wednesday for John Horn Blackmore MP for 22 years who left the schoolroom to plead the case of Social Credit. He died Sunday at Cardston, Alta. at the age of 81.

Blackmore led the Social Credit party in the House of Commons for 10 years after being elected as member for Lethbridge in the 1935 general election.

He was re-elected to the Commons five times continuously from 1935 until his defeat by Deane Gundlock of the Progressive Conservative party in 1958.

Blackmore was a champion of the battle for water rights and improved irrigation in Alberta. He had a major role in the establishment of St. Mary's Dam in southern Alberta.

John Landeryou, Social Credit MLA for Lethbridge and a former MP, Monday paid tribute to Blackmore.

"He was an aggressive member of the House working for the betterment of Alberta and Canada," he said.

Blackmore tried to fire the Commons with his vision of a world freed from monetary woes through Social Credit policies. He failed to transform their scoffing at his money reform theories into belief, but gained wide respect for his sincerity.

COURT THROWS OUT KEY CASES

Hopes Fade for 651 on Death Row

WASHINGTON (CP) Hope faded today for 651 persons sentenced to death in 31 states after the U.S. Supreme court refused to outlaw state executions.

The court's decision Monday in two key cases is not likely to result in wholesale electrocutions, hangings and gassings, but prison officials estimated a pre-1963 level of 40 executions a year seemed possible.

Death sentences were carried out with less frequency starting in 1963, when the Supreme Court began taking long looks at cases challenging the legality of the sentence.

Up to three-quarters of the 644 men and seven women awaiting death have yet to exhaust their appeals. Even a prisoner who refuses to fight for his life can expect to stay alive three years after sentenceing because of automatic appeals.

But that still leaves about 25 per cent of the death row prisoners whose appeals are exhausted and who could face death shortly.

Opponents of capital punishment already are planning meetings to map new strategy to try to outlaw the death sentence.

One move on their part could be to try to persuade governors to follow the example last year of former Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, who commuted 15 death sentences.

But most opponents feel the best method is to end death sentences by law.

The high court's decision came in two cases that sought reversal for convicted murderers on technical grounds, but each case gave the court the chance to strike down the death penalty.

If the court had agreed with the appeals on narrow grounds, it would have been a signal that the nine justices were still debating the death penalty's constitutionality.

EXECUTIONS LIKELY

But their 6-to-3 decision is likely to end the nationwide moratorium on executions since June 2, 1967, when Joe Monge was gassed in Colorado state prison for killing his pregnant wife and three of their children.

Colorado is one of 10 states that use gas chambers. Nineteen states and the District of Columbia have electric chairs and seven states use the gallows. One state, Utah, asks the condemned prisoner to choose between hanging and a firing squad.

The state with the most condemned prisoners is California, where Gov. Ronald Reagan is an advocate of the death penalty.

Ninety-nine people await execution there, including the country's five best known convicted killers, Sirhan B. Sirhan, Senator Robert F. Kennedy's assassin, and Charles Manson and his three women followers, who were sentenced to die for the Sharon Tate killings.

U.S. Navy Contract

OTTAWA (CP) — Leigh Instruments Ltd. of Ottawa has announced it has obtained a $3.5 million U.S. Navy contract to supply flight recorders and crash position indicators for navy planes. The recorder keeps an operational record of vital aircraft systems to aid in accident investigation. The crash position indicator transmits a radio signal that search aircraft can home in on.

WHICH PART OF BODY IS SEXIEST?

LONDON (UPI) — Of the 200 girls asked in a fashion survey what was the sexiest part of their body, 65 replied their legs. Thirty of the girls, aged 16 to 23, rated their breasts their best asset, while 15 threw their weight behind the bottom. Only 10 of the 200 chose their face.

RAY'S ESCAPE ROUTE LED TO CERTAIN DEATH

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty to slaying Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., almost turned his 99-year prison sentence into death when he tried to escape through a prison steam tunnel.

"He would never have survived the heat if he hadn't got out of the tunnel," Warden Robert Moore of Brushy Mountain state prison said Monday after Ray's unsuccessful escape attempt.

Ray was captured in the prison compound as he sought a way over the stone wall of the maximum security prison in the Cumberland Mountains.

He faced a disciplinary board this morning.

Ray was imprisoned after pleading guilty to the sniper slaying of King outside a Memphis motel room April 4, 1968. Subsequently, he has sought and failed to obtain a new trial on grounds his guilty plea was submitted under pressure from his lawyer.

HAD BURNS

"He was in the tunnel for about 10 minutes," Moore said, "and he had a few burns but they didn't appear to be serious."

Moore said it would have been impossible for Ray to reach the end of the tunnel without being scalded to death in the 400 degree heat. The tunnel leads to the prison steam plant outside the prison walls.

Otherwise, it was a well-conceived escape attempt, Moore said.

"First, he removed a concrete block in his cell and got out into an air chamber, a ventilating area behind the cellblock. He crawled along the air chamber to the end and sawed one bar and broke another with a crowbar.

"He pulled himself through the hole and got into the prison yard behind the cellblock. Then he went to the steam tunnel."

SEWAGE GAS TO RUN CARS

PETERBOROUGH, England (CP) — Huntingdonshire council plans to cut the cost of gasoline used by council vehicles — by running them on sludge gas from its sewage works.

The gas will be compressed in bottles fitted to adapted engines. Already six street cleaners have been modified.

Underwater Park Backing Expected

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said here Monday he is confident the provincial government will support Ottawa's plans for an underwater national park in the Strait of Georgia.

But provincial Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan told federal Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien he would have to study a report on the proposed park before making any comment on the idea.

Chretien presented Kiernan with a copy of a federal study on the proposed park in what Chretien described as the first formal contact with Kiernan on the question.

Kiernan has been critical of the federal proposal in the past, saying he had heard about it only through the press.

He told reporters Monday after the meeting with Kiernan that he "hesitates" to offer an opinion on something that he hasn't had time to study.

Davis, who met reporters while Chretien met Kiernan, said he is sure the province will be "quite enthusiastic" about the underwater park.

Chretien said later he is sure that Ottawa and B.C. can get down to serious talks about the park after some "negotiations" are carried out.

"It is impossible to have national parks without the co-operation of the provinces," Chretien said.

Davis said studies are still being carried out to determine what features of underwater life in the strait should be protected in the park and no specific proposals have yet been formulated.

But he said it was unlikely that such a park would have any immediate effect on shipping traffic through the strait, and compared the ships to jet airplanes flying over Banff and Jasper National Parks.

Special shipping regulations would be introduced gradually, he said.

Industry clean-ups, improvement of harbors and the establishment of special zones as wilderness areas would all be part of the park plans, he said.

Davis said the time may not be too far off when people will be able to observe marine life serveral hundred feet below the surface of the water in marine parks.

He said other underwater parks might be established in Canada, such as at Peggy's Cove, Nova Scotia.

The main purpose of Chretien's visit with Kiernan was to discuss land acquisition problems for the Long Beach section of the Pacific Rim National Park. Kiernan said expropriation may be necessary in some cases.

Museum Encourages Sticky Little Hands

The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum will hold classroom instructions this year for students from Grade three and up, and they will be able to handle parts of trees and forest products.

The museum has transferred its entrance gate to the Trans-Canada Highway where visitors will first tour and enter through authentic bunkhouses built over 40 years ago.

One bunkhouse will serve as a display set up exactly like it was when men were living in it while the others will be used as a railroad station, a ticket office and the largest will be for the school program.

Students will be able to wander over the 40 acres, scattered between the highway and Somenos Lake, take in the numerous displays of old farm and forestry equipment, and enjoy a long train ride.

The first classroom instruction, which has been worked out with the Cowichan school board and will be used extensively by the district, will be held May 13, two days before the official opening of the museum for its seventh season.

PRIVATE service in McCall Bros. FAMILY CHAPEL on Thursday, May 6, at 2:00 p.m., with the Rev. P. Atkinson officiating. Interment at Hatley Memorial Gardens. (Flowers gratefully declined.)

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express the sincere gratitude in our hearts to relatives, friends and neighbors for their cards, letters and flowers received during the recent loss of my dearly beloved husband and sadly missed Dad, Cpl. Douglas Gosse. Special thanks to Dr. J. L. W. McLean, Rev. B. Molloy and choir members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Laura Gosse, Sally and Steve.

We wish to offer sincere thanks to all our friends and neighbours and to Drs. O. C. Lucas and A. J. Ibrahim for their help and comfort during Marilyn's recent illness and passing — thanks too to Father Jackson and Father Johnson and to the nurses and staff of the Jubilee Hospital. — Guy Gaudio and Teresa and Raffaele, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Gaudio and Family, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Cross and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GIBSON—In loving memory of Isabella Gibson, who passed away May 4, 1965.

Gone and forgotten by some you may be.
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
—Ever remembered by George, Nancy, Bell and family.

★ ★ ★

MOD SQUAD. 7:30 p.m., Channels 4 and 8. (Rerun.) Anjanette Comer, once the leading lady of bikini beach pictures, is guest star in tonight's segment. The sister of a robbery suspect, she is injured by Pete during a car chase. Pete falls for the girl, then discovers her relationship to the suspect. That makes it a sticky situation.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

"U.S.A." 9 p.m., Channel 9. A musical version of the John Dos Passos trilogy which surveyed American life starting with the turn of the century. Dos Passos wrote the musical version of his own book and it had a moderate run off-Broadway in the early 1960s. George Schaefer directed this TV musical version. It's cast is impressive, with John Davidson, James Farentino Joan Hackett, Shirley Knight, Michelle Lee and the wonderful veteran actor Edward G. Robinson.

★ ★ ★

HEE HAW. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. (Rerun.) Tammy Wynette sings "Stand by Your Man" and "Take Me to Your World." Faren Young offers "She Went a Little Bit Farther" and "Wind Me Up," and a third guest, George Jones, sings "White Lightning" and "Walk Through This World with Me.' They join regulars Buck Owens and Roy Clark.

★ ★ ★

MOVIE OF THE WEEK. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Night Slaves." Lee Grant, twice nominated this year for an Emmy (and also for an Oscar as best supporting actress) co-stars with James Franciscus. Leslie Nielsen and Tish Sterling in a story about mysterious forces that enslave a town. Franciscus wakes up one night to see his wife and townspeople being herded into trucks. A beautiful woman appears but doesn't give any information.

★ ★ ★

FIRST TUESDAY. 7 p.m., Channel 5. Garrick Utley, the network's Paris correspondent, becomes the permanent anchorman tonight. For Utley's first show as a regular, the viewer is given an interesting study in contrasts between GIs arriving in Vietnam while others are leaving, and what each has to say.

★ ★ ★

HOW TO STAY ALIVE. 10 p.m., Channel 4. This should be compulsory viewing in every home for it focuses on personal health. It's aim is to teach viewers how to try to prevent heart attacks. The cinema verite film concentrates on five American men of different backgrounds and pursuits: a dress salesman, taxi dispatcher, cab driver, business executive and a junior high school principal, showing habits and activities. You'll be able to judge your own physical situation on a risk profile chart. Do yourself a favor and watch.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

8:30: Channel 4: Night Slaves (1970 mystery) James Franciscus, Lee Grant. Science-fiction suspense drama involving a vacationer in a sleepy town who awakens one night to see his wife and the townspeople silently board trucks and leave.

11:00: Channel 13: Lost Continent (1951 adventure) Cesar Romero, Hillary Brooke. The Air Force sends a plane after an atom-powered missile, and the crew finds a mysterious land where prehistoric beasts roam.

11:30: Channel 7: An Affair to Remember (1957 drama) Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr. This is a remake of an old Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer film.

11:50: Channel 2: The Seventh Seal (Swedish; 1957 drama) Max von Sydow, Gunner Bjornstrand, Ingmar Bergman's medieval allegory weaves together the eternal question of God and mortality.

PRIVATE service in McCall Bros. FAMILY CHAPEL on Thursday, May 6, at 2:00 p.m., with the Rev. P. Atkinson officiating. Interment at Hatley Memorial Gardens. (Flowers gratefully declined.)

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express the sincere gratitude in our hearts to relatives, friends and neighbors for their cards, letters and flowers received during the recent loss of my dearly beloved husband and sadly missed Dad, Cpl. Douglas Gosse. Special thanks to Dr. J. L. W. McLean, Rev. B. Molloy and choir members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Laura Gosse, Sally and Steve.

We wish to offer sincere thanks to all our friends and neighbours and to Drs. O. C. Lucas and A. J. Ibrahim for their help and comfort during Marilyn's recent illness and passing — thanks too to Father Jackson and Father Johnson and to the nurses and staff of the Jubilee Hospital. — Guy Gaudio and Teresa and Raffaele, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Gaudio and Family, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Cross and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GIBSON—In loving memory of Isabella Gibson, who passed away May 4, 1968.

Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
—Ever remembered by George, Nancy, Bell and family.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

8:30: Channel 4: Night Slaves (1970 mystery) James Franciscus, Lee Grant. Science-fiction suspense drama involving a vacationer in a sleepy town who awakens one night to see his wife and the townspeople sliently board trucks and leave.

11:00: Channel 13: Lost Continent (1951 adventure) Cesar Romero, Hillary Brooke. The Air Force sends a plane after an atom-powered missile, and the crew finds a mysterious land where prehistoric beasts roam.

11:30: Channel 7: An Affair to Remember (1957 drama) Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr. This is a remake of an old Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer film.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A man writes that he had a hiatus hernia, and to my great satisfaction I hear that he has a wise doctor who says that since the hernia (small rupture) has never made any symptoms, the best thing to do is to leave it alone. The patient says that half the time he doesn't know whether the hernia is bothering him or whether he is having just an attack of nervousness and indigestion.

Everyone had a hole in the diaphragm — the muscular partition between the chest and the abdomen — through which the tube-like gullet passes, and then widens into the stomach. In some people, the hole is larger than it needs to be, thus permitting a little bit of the stomach at times, to push up through the hole. Some surgeons operate to sew up the hole, making it smaller. The only probelm is that sometimes the hole is made too small, and the person is even more uncomfortable than he was before.

I have a little hiatus hernia, and fortunately the only time it bothers me is when I eat a big meal, like a Thanksgiving dinner, and then bend over to take off my shoes. Then I can feel the little bubble of stumach pushing up through the hole in my diaphragm, causing some discomfort. But the distress is only temporary, and the rest of the year I don't feel my hiatus hernia, so it would never occur to me to have it operated on.

For a while it was very fashionable to have hiatus hernias operated on, but I am glad to say that the fad now seems about over. I just read that the chief surgeon of a big clinic said that today in his institution, the surgeons operate on hiatus hernias only when the doctors are sure that the symptoms are those typical of a hernia and not something else.

Tanker Hazard Risks Assessed

By PETER BUCKLEY ...

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senior Canadian and American government officials met privately Monday at the state department to discuss possible hazards to the Canadian West Coast from the proposed shipment of Alaska oil by tanker to the U.S. mainland.

As expected, there was no official statement after the meeting. One source who was present at the conference said later the American side had presented its views on safeguards against accidental oil spills and plans to cope with them if they occur.

He said there was a recognition on both sides that there are risks in moving large quantities of oil anywhere, and the meeting attempted to assess the risks and determine how they could be minimized.

There was no discussion of a Canadian suggestion that the Alaska oil could possibly be moved to the mainland by pipeline crossing Canada, instead of a cross-Alaska pipeline and tanker shipment to West Coast U.S. ports.

WON'T COMMENT

U.S. officials who participated and who could be reached afterward generally declined any comment, apparently in acknowledgement that the issue is a sensitive one, particularly in Canada. The Canadians who came here for the one-day conference left directly from the state department for a commercial flight back to Ottawa without issuing a statement.

The meeting followed Canada's expressions of concern that, if the U.S. approves a controversial proposal to ship oil from Alaska's North Slope by cross-Alaska pipeline and tanker, the Canadian West Coast will be endangered from spills collisions or groundings involving the giant oil tankers.

Monday's meeting is understood to have been mainly technical. It was to have covered such topics as navigation along the Pacific Coast and through the narrow waters of Juan de Fuca Strait and Puget Sound, the volumes of oil being considered under the pipeline-tanker proposal, tidal movements which could affect oil spills, and the hazards to marine life.

The Canadian delegation, which included a representative of the British Columbia government, was headed by Kenneth Wardroper, director-general of the bureau of economic affairs in the external affairs department.

U.S. GROUP LARGE

George S. Springstein, an economist and deputy assistant secretary of state, led a large American delegation that included representatives from the interior and commerce departments environmental agencies, the maritime administration and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The pipeline-tanker proposal, made by a consortium of U.S. oil companies, has encountered strong opposition from environmental groups which already has delayed it many months.

There have been several unfavorable reports even from within U.S. government agencies about dangers to the delicate northern environment and sea life, although a preliminary study from the interior department recommended that the proposal go ahead on grounds of national security and what was described as a budding energy shortage in the U.S.

Interior Secretary Rogers Morton has indicated he will make a decision on the proposal by next September, although the scheme could still be delayed further by court actions.

Sewer Cost Jumps Estimate

Sidney's sewer system and treatment plant will cost $1 million, $284,000 more than originally estimated, Capital Regional District engineer Bill Gerry said today.

The first cost figures were "unreasonably low," and were brought forward last June despite rising construction and material costs, he said.

Tenders for installation of sewer trunk lines will be called in three weeks.

There has also been a change in system concept, "a clarification of Pollution Control Board policies" which stipulates treatment of all storm water which enters the sewer system. This means a bigger plant and more powerful pumps although Sidney has committed itself, in writing, to remove most of the storm water from sanitary sewers within 10 years, all within 15 years.

'UNDEDICATION'

Another change in the design was necessitated by moving the treatment plant site from Tulista Park. Use of the park for this purpose would have required "undedication", provincial government approval and a public referendum.

A site nearby on private property is still under negotiation but Gerry is confident that tenders for the plant will be ready in six weeks.

Third reason for the cost increase is redesignation of a regional, rather than municipal responsibility. Although this increases the apparent cost, it is actually to Sidney's advantage, says Gerry because the district has a preferred position on the money market.

'INTERIM MEASURE'

Although the new design calls for a 2,000-foot outfall, the system will utilize the present 1,400 foot outfall at Ocean Avenue as "an interim measure." Sewage will receive second stage treatment before diffusion.

If monitoring proves this outfall inefficient, the pipe will be extended, the engineer said.

Mayor Stan Dear said Monday there is no reason to doubt that provincial funds will be made available for the project although costs have risen considerably.

Now that the district is "tying up the loose ends," Mayor Dear said he is confident that provincial financial assistance will be forthcoming.

The government has said it will provide 75 per cent of the trunk link and treatment plant costs.

POLICE FIND ONE BODY

NANAIMO (CP) — Police Monday found the body of Robert McVicker, 50, of 773 Hunter St., Nanaimo, following a search for two fishermen missing since Sunday.

The second man, John Mrus, 42, of 758 Hunter, is still missing. A 14-foot boat used by the men on a fishing expedition to nearby Five Fingers Island was found earlier Monday.

BEN FRANKLIN'S

UNUSUAL COPY

Benjamin used advertisements for everything and anything. This amusing example from the July 14, 1737, issue of his newspaper, The Pennsylvania Gazette, illustrates his unusual copy:

"TAKEN OUT OF A PEW IN the Church some months since, a Common Prayer Book, bound in red, gilt, and lettered D.F. (Deborah Franklin) on each cover. The who-took-it is desired to open it and read the eighth Commandment, and afterwards return it into the same Pew again, upon which no further Notice will be taken."

Second Chance for Quassia

By HILDA BEASTALL

Back in 1921 quassia was rated as such a useful gardening material that it merited an article to itself in Black's Gardening Dictionary. It was the standard remedy against aphis and other leaf sucking insects, but was not thought to be effective against leaf chewers such as caterpillars.

Hilda

Today an informed public is willing to give quassia another try since its previous record of usefulness remained unchallenged for over 100 years.

Quassia chips, the product one buys to make up the spray solution, are taken from several tropical trees of the genus Quassia. The name was first used in 1765 when a native of Euirnam (Dutch Guinea) discovered the virtues the the tree.

It was originally used medicinally as a bitter tonic and a remedy for pinworm, later as an ingredient in the production of beer; then around 1850 as an insecticide against aphis.

The Columbia Encyclopedia points out quassia was used in the preparation of flypapers at some period. I suppose we could coat strips of brown paper with molasses then spray with quassia solution to make a non-volatile attractant to house flies.

One ton of quassia chips contains a meagre 10 ounces of the bitter principle called Quassin, but this is enough to make 24,000 gallons of quassia solution.

A simple method for home preparation is to soak a handful of chips in a little hot water and let stand overnight. Add a teaspoon of soft soap in the morning, and cold water to make one gallon.

For large quantity: one pound chips soaked overnight in cold water to cover. Next day simmer for 12 hours in one gallon water, strain through cheesecloth or fine wire screen, add 10 ounces soft soap and make into 10 gallons with cold water. When spraying do not apply in bright sunshine.

At present, quassia chips are available locally at some drug stores.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

When Alexander the Great was ruler of the world back in the '320s BC, he visited Diogenes, the philosopher — who lived outdoors, in a tub — and said to him: "Anything you desire, you can have."

Diogenes, whose philosophy of life was to reduce material things to the barest of necessities so as to leave the mind as free as possible, replied:

"You can stand a little to one side, and not keep the sun off me."

Such is history's version of their conversation. However, I have it from another source that Diogenes' actual answer was:

"Alex, why do you spend all your time trying to acquire material goods? Do me a favor. Get a good book on bridge and study it. Your bidding is really terrible."

Diogenes was quite right. Alexander was a terrible bidder, as can be evidenced from the following deal, which might have arisen in the Macedonian Regional Championships. Alexander was sitting South.

NORTH
♠ A Q J 9 8
♡ K 7 3
◇ K 6 5 2
♣ 8

WEST
♠ 4 2
♡ 9 5 4
◇ J 9 8
♣ A Q 9 6 3

EAST
♠ K 5 3
♡ J 10 6 2
◇ Q 3

SOUTH
♠ 10 7 6
♡ A Q 8
◇ A 10 7 4
♣ K J 10

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

Alexander won the opening lead with his ten of clubs, after which he led the ten of spades and took the finesse. Upon winning the trick with his king, East returned a club. West now cashed four club tricks, and South was down one.

At a four-spade contract, North would have had smooth sailing, losing just one spade, one diamond and one club. Had Alexander been a better bidder, the final contract would have been four spades. South's jump to two no-trump was the right bid, of course, showing 13-15 points and protection in each of the unbid suits. The bid said: "I have both the desire and the ability to play a three no-trump contract."

When North rebid spades, he stated: "I don't like no-trump because I have an unbalanced hand. I also have a good spade suit and would prefer to play at four spades."

Having been forewarned that North was apprehensive about no-trump, South, having three spades and knowing that partner had five of them, should have raised to four spades. But, as Diogenes pointed out, Alexander was a bad bidder; and the rebid of three no-trump received its just desserts.

TEMPER LOSS EXPLAINED

TORONTO (CP) — People who buy homes near the ends of airport runways and then complain about noise are "just not too bright," an air traffic controller said here. Senior controller Walter Morris, who works at Toronto International Airport, complained about calls to controllers from the public concerned about airport noise. "If, occasionally, after the 50th call we lose our tempers then I think it's understandable."

HIPPIES FINE, BUT NOT PART-TIMERS

LONDON (CP) — Hippies are an asset to society because they are trying to make the dream of a different world come true, writes Salvation Army captain Thomas Henderson in the Church Army Review.

Henderson, a social worker, condemns the part-time hippie who dresses up to attend pop festivals. A genuine hippie, he claims doesn't even like the name society has given him.

More Labor Books Urged For Public Libraries

Libraries can play a part in changing British Columbia's hostile attitude toward trade unions, a union leader told the B.C. Centennial Citizens' Conference on Libraries Monday.

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, told conference delegates there has been a general deterioration in the industrial relations climate throughout the province.

"The public climate in this province is hostile to organized labor generally, especially to the leadership of the trade union movement," he said.

OFFENDED

Fryer added that union leaders are offended by gratuitous pronouncements which mean "Some of my best friends belong to unions — but, oh, those rabble-rousing labor bosses."

He said there will be a further worsening of labor-management relations unless there is a drastic change of attitudes on all sides.

"Libraries can foster this change by increasing budgets for books dealing with the history, structure and personalities of the North American trade union movements."

He urged libraries to beef up their selection of research material dealing with labor-management relations and trade union periodicals.

Fryer also called for regular exchange of information between library associations with such organizations as the Canadian Labor Congress and the B.C. Federation of Labor.

He said that trade unionists should be invited to serve on library boards and advisory committees.

Stressing the need for regionalization and planning of library services, delegates were told that about 85,000 people had no access to any type of library service.

Roy Stokes, director of the University of British Columbia's school of librarianship, said:

"We just can't say that because you live in an adminstratively difficult area, 'We're sorry you exist'.

"Our priorities have gone all askew . . . We have to accept some type of unity in the province. It (the province) is the community and it has a responsibility to provide library services to the province."

Fair Dates All Set

Victoria Jaycee Fair, May 17 to 24; Comox Valley Exhibition, Courtenay, July 23 to 25; Vancouver Island Exhibition, Nanaimo, Aug. 18 to 21; Arrowsmith Agricultural Association, Coombs, Aug. 27 to 28; Shawnigan-Cobble Hill Agricultural Association, Cobble Hill, Aug. 28; North and South Saanich Agricultural Association, Saanichton, Sept. 4 to 6; Alberni District Fall Fair, Sept. 9 to 11; Sooke Fall Fair, Sept. 11.

The Pacific National Exhibition will be held in Vancouver from Aug. 21 to Sept. 6.

SHOT HUSBAND IN FACE

Housewife Avoids Jail Term

A Saanich housewife was given a suspended sentence in B.C. Supreme Court Monday after she pleaded guilty to shooting her husband in the face Jan. 10.

Mrs. Roberta Claire Schlect, 33, of 3954 Carey Road, entered her guilty plea on a reduced charge of firing a gun with intent to wound. She originally had been charged with attempted murder.

"You'll have to learn to control your temper," Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm told the accused in passing the three-year suspended sentence.

Crown prosecutor Louis Lindholm said Mrs. Schlect and her husband, Alvin, had had "differences" on the day of the shooting. The accused had been drinking that day, and had been given instruction by her 14-year-old son on how to fire a .22-calibre revolver.

Mrs. Schlect was waiting for her husband when he came in the door, but had not fired the gun until he moved to take it from her, defence lawyer Robert Price told the court.

Price said the accused drank little and was in a near-hystrical condition at the time of the shooting because she had been drinking.

Police were called to the home by a neighbor at 1:20 a.m. and when they arrived found Schlect bleeding from a facial wound. The injury was not serious but constituted a "narrow escape," Lindholm said.

Price said the Schlects were still living together and working to keep the marriage going.

Dohm noted that the offence was a "violent act," but said a jail term was not necessary as a deterrent.

Cigar Chief Quits for Job In Victoria

R. B. Alexander, 55, said, after being 38 years with Imperial Tobacco, "the prospect of a new challenge is exciting."

Victoria and Nanaimo operations of E. A. Morris were taken over recently by Ryan and Co., of Nanaimo. Morris' Vancouver outlet remains independent.

Alexander left General Cigar Friday and was in Victoria in his new capacity Monday. He said he found it stimulating that in spite of the U.S. and other outside interests that have dominated many Canadian businesses, a Nanaimo company had moved ahead in the tobacco wholesale trade on Vancouver Island.

STARTED IN 1925

Ryan and Co. started its business in Nanaimo in 1925, expanded to Courtenay in 1948, to Port Alberni in 1950, to Campbell River in 1964 and to Victoria in 1967.

A former Winnipeg resident, Alexander was based in Vancouver from 1960-65 as western representative of Imperial, followed by the post of merchandising manager in Montreal, which led to the office of Genral Cigar president. GC is an Imperial subsidiary.

Look to Future, Queen Urges

American Dollar Reeling

LONDON (AP)—Currency speculators sent the United States dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only heavy buying by the Bank of England kept the rate just off the mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The jump was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the undervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's central bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $120 million in the last hour Monday.

WANT MARK SET FREE

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark—now pegged at 27 cents — to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up, too.

The British pound was caught in the squeeze but to a lesser extent. However, the Bank of England is reputed to have taken in more than $1 billion since December, driving the country's rate of inflation up to the highest level of any country, in Western Europe, 8½ per cent.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government raised the value of the mark 8.5 per cent to end the 1969 crisis. But so far officials of the central bank of Frankfurt deny that it is likely to be revalued upward or allowed to float free in the near future.

. . . Songs, Cheers and 21 BLAMs!

A royal arrival is an emotional blast — charged by anticipation, made to tingle by the deluge of color, sound and masses of people.

It was that way on the huge green spread of the Legislature lawn this morning.

First the anticipation.

Youngsters massed on the Legislature steps, packed in like bees, armed with tiny pennants, backed by the glittering brass horns of their band. Bursts of cheering for everything, for nothing.

HONOR GUARD

The bands blast while everyone strolls and waits. Kids wrestling on the lawn, running, hollering, climbing statues and trees, being ordered down again.

All sorts of outfits — sports shirts and tweeds, pant suits and fur collars, jeans and long hair.

FIRST ROUND

And then — BLAM — the first shattering round in the royal salute. It echoes across the Inner Harbor, bounces off the Empress and swings back to the Legislature.

The striking impression of the Queen as she passes slowly by on Belleville in her limousine — is youth. She looks so startingly young. She smiles and there is the regal wave. Polite applause rides down the lines of the crowd. Kids are hoisted on their dad's shoulders.

It is the young people on the Legislature steps who cut loose when she arrives. The pennants wave frantically and all those thin voices swell together to drown out everything else.

There is God Save the Queen, but with something more in it. And surprise, there is an upbeat of folk song, solo and chorus, about British Columbia. It's a bragging song, but on that lawn, with the sunshine, color and crowd, a gentle warm breeze, it's not all that boastful.

In quiet cultured tones she responds, in English and French. She speaks of her "admiration and affection for this glorious part of Canada."

And, she says, "You have made us very welcome."

Then there is the ritual signing of some black ledger and the Queen moves off the platform and pauses with Prince Philip to chat with the children.

Slowly they move toward Heritage Court and the museum.

The prince had stopped to look at totem poles carved by B.C. Indians to represent the provinces of Canada when he pointed at one of the poles and said something that broke three of the cameramen into laughter.

During the walk the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne stopped to talk with carver Henry Hunt and his wife and chief James Sewid, the centennial chairman for Indian participation from Alert Bay.

"She said it's beautiful, it's impressive," Sewid said when asked what the Queen had said to him.

The royal party accompanied by Premier and Mrs. Bennett visited the Provincial Museum for five minutes as they walked through Heritage Court.

People jammed both sides of the route the Queen walked from the front entrance of the provincial legislature across Government, down a narrow passageway beside the new Provincial Archives building and into the spacious courtyard between the archives building and the museum.

Three members of the royal party stopped frequently to talk with members of the crowd and the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs who lined the front of the crowd.

"I was thrilled," said Mrs. Clair McCaul of her brief chat with Queen Elizabeth.

"She asked me which group I was with and I told her the Royal Canadian Air Force. I then told her I portrayed Queen Victoria in the 24th of May parade, and she replied 'I know.'

Mrs. McCaul said she "felt quite at ease" talking to the Queen, who she met briefly at a Buckingham Palace garden party years ago in England.

"I'm so proud to think she picked me to speak to," she said.

ENJOYS OUTING

A stiff breeze lent a sudden flair of color and pomp to the royal outing as it set banners and flags snapping and waving above the Heritage Court crowd.

The only incident occurred when a mustachioed, bemedalled security man in a green uniform chased several small boys out of a tree overlooking the Queen's route.

THERE'S MORE INSIDE ON THE ROYAL VISIT

JOBLESS PAY FOR ALL MPs?

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs are considering a proposal that could make voters less squeamish about turning them out of office at the next election.

The Commons labor committee today dealt with the question of whether members should contribute to the unemployment insurance fund, which would make those who didn't have another job or couldn't find one eligible for benefits of $100 a week following an electoral ejection.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said he really didn't think MPs would include themselves within the plan because they wanted to be assured of benefits.

Rather, they should not allow themselves to be exempt from paying unemployment insurance premium payments when they were pressing for the more universal scheme proposed by the bill, which brings in relatively secure people who did not especially want coverage.

Happy Crowd Greets Royalty

Queen Elizabeth told British Columbians today they must look ahead and show concern for "the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these spendid natural surroundings."

The Queen's plea with an unmistakable environmental tone came at the conclusion of her 500-world reply to the official welcome address from Premier Bennett on the legislative grounds today.

Bennett followed up with an announcement that the province has established, with the Queen's consent, a Queen Elizabeth the Second Scholarship.

It will provide $5,000 for a graduate of a B.C. university each year, for study in the United Kingdom.

The Queen's bilingual address — she spoke a few words in French about Canada's dual culture — recalled that she had first visited "this glorious part of Canada" 20 years ago.

She said it seemed "hardly possible" that so much had been achieved in those years, and she referred to "the tall buildings, the wide roads, the comfortable homes, the universities and the thriving industries."

She spoke of the need for co-operation and tolerance in the achievement of progress and the development of a "humane civilization."

Said the Queen in conclusion:

"I think you can all look back with satisfaction and with gratitude to your predecessors who laid the foundations so well.

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

Premier Bennett extended the official provincial welcome to the Royal Family and welcomed "the opportunity it affords us to express directly to Your Majesty our deep and admiring loyalty."

Along with the inspection of an honor guard and a 21-gun salute, the brief speeches were just about the only formal parts of a warm welcome for the Royal Family by thousands of people.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne all appeared in cheerful spirits and continually stopped to chat with bystanders as they strolled from the legislative grounds to Heritage Court across Government Street.

The excitement began to build at 10 a.m. when the first of the 21 cannon blasts rang out, startling the large crowd.

The Queen, wearing a dress and coat of maize yellow wool gabardine, moved smartly off to inspect the guard of honor, pausing once or twice to chat with a member of the guard.

The band played God Save the Queen followed by the massed choir, made up of students from the Greater Victoria school system, singing Oh' Canada.

Princess Anne, wearing a dress and jacket described as "stone-colored nattier worsted," stopped to chat with young Valerie Lowther, of 2023 Townley, who was in a wheelchair on the driveway of the legislative buildings.

Rich Margison of Claremont Secondary School sang the verses to a song he wrote with classmate Greg Davidson, called "For This Is British Columbia."

The locally-written song, which seemed to please the Queen, was given precedence over the official centennial song written by Bobby Gimby and called "Go British Columbia." That song was sung as the Royal party moved off toward Heritage Court.

Spectators lined the short route from the Royal Yacht Britannia to the legislative buildings to get a close glimpse of the Royal Family, who arrived in an open car. The route was along Belleville and Government streets and the legislature driveway.

The Loyal Royal Crush

Campus of Suspicion

Lack of Communication Called Main Problem

Both sides in the dispute that has disrupted the University of Victoria campus must be willing to modify their positions and talk with each other before any solution can be reached, the former associate dean of arts and science said Monday.

"There must be a constructive attempt to respond and not to be suspicious of motives," said Dr. Peter Smith, who resigned suddenly from the administration earlier in the spring.

The Classics professor, who will return to teaching at the undergraduate level next term, granted the interview to the Times to discuss the reasons behind his abrupt resignation from the administration of president Bruce J. Partridge.

He accused the administration and board of governors of being "insensitive" to students and faculty and out of touch with the academic community.

He also charged that suspicion on the part of the faculty association had been "extreme" although he expressed some sympathy with the organization's goals and arguments.

Smith declined to comment on specific reasons for his resignation because they were "matters of conscience and it wouldn't be right for me to discuss them."

"There has been too much rhetoric all year," he said. "I'm not going to add to it by striking a new pose of my own.

"My attitudes toward the purpose and style of university government were not compatible with the prevailing view."

Smith said he was convinced that the administration and board of governors had been trying to find solutions to the present difficulties.

Governors 'Terribly Isolated' From Academic Community

Lack of communication between the board, the administration and the students constituted a major problem at Uvic, he said.

•

Smith said the present attitude of the administration upset him because "there has been a reluctance to admit that a problem has existed."

"I wonder if ever over the past two years the president and academic deans have sat down with the Faculty Association executive and discussed the problems of the university.

"I'm implying, of course, that they didn't at any time when I was in office and I think that this applies just as much to the Faculty Association.

He said that on the part of the administration "the insensitivity has consisted of an inability to see what the grievances might be."

Among the administration at Uvic there has been a feeling that "administrators have a higher wisdom," Smith said.

"As an ex-administrator I don't feel that I have any higher wisdom and there is considerable doubt that any of us have a higher wisdom."

He said the existence of a "bureaucratic-hierarchical approach to univerfsity administration" led to insensitivity at Uvic.

"This is something I feel quite deeply about.

"I'm very unhappy about the bureaucratic-hierarchical approach. It is not a case of chain of command — the university administration must identify, articulate and fulfill the needs of the academic community.

"When differences arise it must reconcile them. There has clearly been no reconciliation at the University of Victoria."

He said at the mass meeting called by Partridge and attended by 3,000 students there was an hour-and-a-half of "rhetoric from the administration" before the first speaker from the floor was entertained.

"You present a position and say here you are — chip away at it. That's not acceptable."

Smith said a "corporate" business-like approach to the administration of Uvic did not produce a democratic climate.

"I guess I'm a doctrinaire democrat," he said, "I feel that a community has to chart its own course — whether it's right or wrong.

•

"I'm also a pragmatist and I do believe in working flexibly toward solutions and not taking rigid positions."

"Even if there were 40 scheming radicals on campus one must administrate the university in such a way that one can accommodate the 40 scheming radicals."

Smith said he absolutely rejected suggestions "the administration has been sinister or malevolent."

"The most severe criticism that I would have is that they have been unresponsive and dogmatic."

He voiced sympathy and support for the cause of the students during the Uvic upheavals, and said students who were deeply involved in the turmoil had a very good understanding of the situation.

"The students have been trying to tell the administration that they consider undergraduate teaching to be the most important issue and their sincerity has been doubted."

Administrative responses, particularly to student demands with respect to contract and tenure disputes involving 12 faculty members (three of them the cases before the Canadian Association of University Teachers), had led to frustration and anger, he said.

A fast-talking academic conman could fake his way for a few years, Smith said, but if he really wasn't good students would see through his act.

"If an undergraduate teacher can maintain his reputation throughout four or five years while a generation of students have graduated — I think student opinion will be pretty accurate.

"These men at Uvic have not been flashy teachers," he said, "and they have good reputations with the students."

He said his primary interest and objective at Uvic was "to keep the university an undergraduate teaching institution."

"I'm talking about an attitude toward a university."

Rest Homes Ready to Take Welfare Offer

The executive of the British Columbia Rest Homes Association has decided to accept a provincial government offer of $174 a patient per month for welfare patients revoking an earlier threat to evict welfare patients.

* * *

The vice-president of the association, John Hanrahan, said today the executive decision will have to be approved by the membership at a general meeting scheduled for May 12 in Victoria.

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi last week announced a $24-a-month increase in the rate paid by the government to private rest homes, to $174 from $150.

* * *

Hanrahan said the executive of the association has decided to accept the new figure as a base rate only and to seek higher payments in further discussions with the government regarding cases involving a greater degree of care.

ONE FACES TRIAL

Stay Ordered In Fraud Case

A stay of proceedings was entered Monday in Victoria provincial court by the Crown in the case of Earl Wilbert Large, 882 Beckwith, charged jointly with his brother on counts of theft and fraud, one of which involves $1 million.

His brother, Walter Frank Large, 4230 Glendenning, through counsel, waived the remainder of his preliminary hearing and Judge William Ostler committed him for trial in a higher court.

Prosecutor Ray Paris told court the attorney-general's department was entering the stay of proceedings. He also disclosed that defence counsel had agreed to waive the rest of the preliminary hearing.

The charges were read against the Larges last August and one count alleges a $1 million fraud. The brothers have been principles of the Victoria-based B.C. public company Datatech Systems Ltd.

A no-publication order was issued by Ostler when the preliminary hearing started late last year. The hearing sat most of eight days in December and another six days in February.

THE HIGHLY-SPECIALized job I'm about to describe is already taken. But supposing for a moment that it was up for grabs, here in broad outline is what it would require of you.

Lengthy training.

Strict self-discipline and a sense of responsibility. Also the stamina to cope with tightly-scheduled days.

You would be expected to meet people of all sorts, conditions and ranks, to preserve your calm, and to smile even when smiling came hard.

You would be under close and not always inconspicuous surveillance. Part of your job would be to attend an endless succession of functions, at which you would listen to speeches, acknowledge introductions graciously, and maintain an unshakable poise.

On occasion it would be necessary for you to speak in public The small luxury of being a few minutes late for any engagement would be denied you.

To handle this job successfully, you would be required to spend a considerable amount of time in travel by air, land and sea. At times, particularly while your children were young, this could entail painful and perhaps worrying separations for varying periods.

In theory, your on-the-job expenses would be paid, but on occasion you might be obliged to draw on your personal funds. And except when a too-short holiday offered relief, your job would continue unchanged through the years

A sinecure? Think well before you answer. My own opinion is that life bestows few occupations more demanding than the one I've sketched.

Here's a health unto Her Majesty, no Centennial visitor more welcome, who conducts her difficult task with dignity and grace! May her visit to this Island bring pleasure along with the weight of duties well-performed.

Others have noted a decrease this spring in the number of garden insects. But the honey-bee I saw clinging to a twig in a dopey condition wasn't necessarily a victim of pesticide. It may have been starving to death.

That possibility was suggested by a bee-keeper who told me how his charges go about their day's foraging.

A bee that has scouted out a good source of nectar will load up and return to the hive. Arrived, it will go into what seems like an aimless dance, but is actually a concise set of directions to other industrious hive-dwellers.

In effect, it is telling them that if they fly a beeline on the bearings he's supplying, they'll find good pickings.

Before a worker responds, it takes on a ration of honey to sustain it on the flight. If it misjudges, as my bee perhaps did, it's in trouble.

"What I do when I find a bee in that state," my informant said, "is tumble it into a jar and take it up to the house. Then I dip some liquid honey on the end of a toothpick and offer it to the bee. I treated one that way just the other day. It began to feed on the honey, and in only a few seconds, it was coming round . . . combing itself with its legs and acting much livelier. When I took it outside, it flew off in good shape."

Further hive lore: bees are selective harvesters, and won't waste time trying to coax nectar from blooms not yet in a state to yield it.

"This time of year," said the bee-keeper, "you're likely to find them at work on the maple sprays."

Thus guided, I hunted up a maple. Sure enough, several busy bees of domestic strain were tucking away the nectar yield of its pollen-heavy bloom.

Since none seemed in need of a pick-me-up, I went in and enjoyed a taste of honey myself.

Look to Future, Queen Urges

American Dollar Reeling

LONDON (AP)—Currency speculators sent the United States dollar reeling on European exchanges today, and the flood of U.S. money exchanged for West German marks, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs threatened to send inflation soaring further.

The dollar was on the floor in Frankfurt and Zurich. Only heavy buying by the Bank of England kept the rate just off the mandatory intervention point of $2.42 to the pound.

Anxiety over the monetary situation drove the price of gold up in the London and Zurich free markets. The jump was 43 cents in London to $39.86, the highest level since the 1969 crisis over the undervaluation of the mark.

West Germany's central bank was reported to have taken in $250 million to $300 million in the first hours of trading today and more than $120 million in the last hour Monday.

WANT MARK SET FREE

The speculation apparently was touched off by the call from five West German economic research institutes Monday for the mark—now pegged at 27 cents — to be set free in world markets to combat inflation.

Speculators saw a chance of a quick profit, anticipating another upward revaluation of the mark that might even force the guilder and the Swiss franc to go up, too.

The British pound was caught in the squeeze but to a lesser extent. However, the Bank of England is reputed to have taken in more than $1 billion since December, driving the country's rate of inflation up to the highest level of any country, in Western Europe, 8½ per cent.

Chancellor Willy Brandt's government raised the value of the mark 8.5 per cent to end the 1969 crisis. But so far officials of the central bank of Frankfurt deny that it is likely to be revalued upward or allowed to float free in the near future.

. . . Songs, Cheers and 21 BLAMs!

A royal arrival is an emotional blast — charged by anticipation, made to tingle by the deluge of color, sound and masses of people.

It was that way on the huge green spread of the Legislature lawn this morning.

First the anticipation.

Youngsters massed on the Legislature steps, packed in like bees, armed with tiny penants, backed by the glittering brass horns of their band. Bursts of cheering for everything, for nothing.

HONOR GUARD

And just across the way, the spartan black hull and white superstructure of Britannia, her Royal Standard, the Union Jack, the Maple Leaf along her only string of color.

The bands blast while everyone strolls and waits. Kids wrestling on the lawn, running, hollering, climbing statues and trees, being ordered down again.

All sorts of outfits — sports shirts and tweeds, pant suits and fur collars, jeans and long hair.

FIRST ROUND

And then — BLAM — the first shattering round in the royal salute. It echoes across the Inner Harbor, bounces off the Empress and swings back to the Legislature.

The striking impression of the Queen as she passes slowly by on Belleville in her limousine — is youth. She looks so startingly young. She smiles and there is the regal wave. Polite applause rides down the lines of the crowd. Kids are hoisted on their dad's shoulders.

It is the young people on the Legislature steps who cut loose when she arrives. The pennants wave frantically and all those thin voices swell together to drown out everything else.

There is God Save the Queen, but with something more in it. And surprise, there is an upbeat of folk song, solo and chorus, about British Columbia. It's a bragging song, but on that lawn, with the sunshine, color and crowd, a gentle warm breeze, it's not all that boastful.

In quiet cultured tones she responds, in English and French. She speaks of her "admiration and affection for this glorious part of Canada."

And, she says, "You have made us very welcome."

Then there is the ritual signing of some black ledger and the Queen moves off the platform and pauses with Prince Philip to chat with the children.

Slowly they move toward Heritage Court and the museum.

The prince had stopped to look at totem poles carved by B.C. Indians to represent the provinces of Canada when he pointed at one of the poles and said something that broke three of the cameramen into laughter.

During the walk the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne stopped to talk with carver Henry Hunt and his wife and chief James Sewid, the centennial chairman for Indian participation from Alert Bay.

"She said it's beautiful, it's impressive," Sewid said when asked what the Queen had said to him.

The royal party accompanied by Premier and Mrs. Bennett visited the Provincial Museum for five minutes as they walked through Heritage Court.

People jammed both sides of the route the Queen walked from the front entrance of the provincial legislature across Government, down a narrow passageway beside the new Provincial Archives building and into the spacious courtyard between the archives building and the museum.

Three members of the royal party stopped frequently to talk with members of the crowd and the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs who lined the front of the crowd.

"I was thrilled," said Mrs. Clair McCaul of her brief chat with Queen Elizabeth.

"She asked me which group I was with and I told her the Royal Canadian Air Force. I then told her I portrayed Queen Victoria in the 24th of May parade, and she replied 'I know.'

Mrs. McCaul said she "felt quite at ease" talking to the Queen, who she met briefly at a Buckingham Palace garden party years ago in England.

"I'm so proud to think she picked me to speak to," she said.

ENJOYS OUTING

A stiff breeze lent a sudden flair of color and pomp to the royal outing as it set banners and flags snapping and waving above the Heritage Court crowd.

RCMP security officers had no trouble with the crowd save for the odd youngster too short to be held by the restraining rope.

The only incident occurred when a mustachioed, be-medalled security man in a green uniform chased several small boys out of a tree overlooking the Queen's route.

JOBLESS PAY FOR ALL MPs?

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs are considering a proposal that could make voters less squeamish about turning them out of office at the next election.

The Commons labor committee today dealt with the question of whether members should contribute to the unemployment insurance fund, which would make those who didn't have another job or couldn't find one eligible for benefits of $100 a week following an electoral ejection.

The committee is studying Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's bill to expand unemployment insurance coverage and to increase benefits.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said he really didn't think MPs would include themselves within the plan because they wanted to be assured of benefits.

Rather, they should not allow themselves to be exempt from paying unemployment insurance premium payments when they were pressing for the more universal scheme proposed by the bill, which brings in relatively secure people who did not especially want coverage.

Happy Crowd Greets Royalty

Queen Elizabeth told British Columbians today they must look ahead and show concern for "the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these spendid natural surroundings."

The Queen's plea, with an unmistakable environmental tone came at the conclusion of her 500-world reply to the official welcome address from Premier Bennett on the legislative grounds today.

Bennett followed up with an announcement that the province has established, with the Queen's consent, a Queen Elizabeth the Second Scholarship.

It will provide $5,000 for a graduate of a B.C. university each year, for study in the United Kingdom.

The Queen's bilingual address — she spoke a few words in French about Canada's dual culture — recalled that she had first visited "this glorious part of Canada" 20 years ago.

★ ★ ★

She said it seemed "hardly possible" that so much had been achieved in those years, and she referred to "the tall buildings, the wide roads, the comfortable homes, the universities and the thriving industries."

She spoke of the need for co-operation and tolerance in the achievement of progress and the development of a "humane civilization."

Said the Queen in conclusion:

"I think you can all look back with satisfaction and with gratitude to your predecessors who laid the foundations so well.

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and civilized human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

Premier Bennett extended the official provincial welcome to the Royal Family and welcomed "the opportunity it affords us to express directly to Your Majesty our deep and admiring loyalty."

★ ★ ★

Along with the inspection of an honor guard and a 21-gun salute, the brief speeches were just about the only formal parts of a warm welcome for the Royal Family by thousands of people.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne all appeared in cheerful spirits and continually stopped to chat with bystanders as they strolled from the legislative grounds to Heritage Court across Government Street.

The excitement began to build at 10 a.m. when the first of the 21 cannon blasts rang out, startling the large crowd.

★ ★ ★

The Queen, wearing a dress and coat of maize yellow wool gabardine, moved smartly off to inspect the guard of honor, pausing once or twice to chat with a member of the guard.

The band played God Save the Queen followed by the massed choir, made up of students from the Greater Victoria school system, singing O Canada.

Princess Anne, wearing a dress and jacket described as "stone-colored nattier worsted," stopped to chat with young Valerie Lowther, of 2023 Townley, who was in a wheelchair on the driveway of the legislative buildings.

The princess asked about the activities at the George Pearkes Clinic, said Valerie's mother.

Rich Margison of Claremont Secondary School sang the verses to a song he wrote with classmate Greg Davidson, called "For This Is British Columbia."

The locally-written song, which seemed to please the Queen, was given precedence over the official centennial song written by Bobby Gimby and called "Go British Columbia." That song was sung as the Royal party moved off toward Heritage Court.

Spectators lined the short route from the Royal Yacht Britannia to the legislative buildings to get a close glimpse of the Royal Family, who arrived in an open car. The route was along Belleville and Government streets and the legislature driveway.

Brilliant Start for Royal Visit

The magic of a royal visit brought smiles to even the most cynical of faces Monday night as thousands of Victorians and visitors welcomed the Queen to town in perfect summer weather.

Everybody was happy as Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, Princess Anne, Governor-General and Mrs. Michener and the newlywed Trudeaus turned a normally quiet weeknight into pandemonium downtown.

There were no untoward incidents, as tour organizers like to say instead of trouble.

Disappointment was expressed by some that the crowds were not bigger. Estimates of the throngs at dockside, along the parade route and at Centennial Square varied widely, from Premier Bennett's enthusiatic 150,000 on down.

But what they may have lacked in numbers, the thousands made up in ardor, and at one point in the city hall ceremony came close to mobbing the royal party in their efforts to get closer.

Yacht Arrives

Almost as if they were waiting for something to cheer about, the crowd in the dock area shouted and waved as Britannia's flags were hoisted aloft when the yacht docked at 6.45 p.m.

Estimates of the dockside throng varied. An RCMP officer said 4,000, a city police officer said 5,000, a television reporter estimated there were 10,000 in the harbor area.

Well-barricaded behind wooden fences and orderly police lines, the crowd cheered again as the crew of the Britannia slow-marched to three decks and stood at attention facing the shore.

On the upper third deck of the yacht, 17 Royal Marines in topi helmets, and on the middle deck 42 ship's officers gazed out at flag-waving children and camera-toting tourists as interestedly as the crowd looked up at them.

First Sight

Amidst Royal Navy ensign and the Union Jack, the Maple Leaf flew in a weak breeze from the second last mast.

For Canadians accustomed to the roar of hockey arenas or football stands, the applause which greeted the royal party's appearance on the gangway was quiet, restrained.

The Queen walked directly to the waiting car. Prince Philip talked briefly with a small boy squatting near the barricade: "You're shooting directly into the sun. You should be on the other site."

The Trudeaus also moved quickly to the line of autos, and were applauded as loudly as the royal party. Governor-General and Mrs. Michener left the yacht three minutes later to quiet applause.

'Serves Purpose'

Observed J. Maurice Langelier, a Montreal businessman who retired here two years ago; "The monarchy is all right. It serves its purpose." Langelier said he had grown up in Trudeau's neighborhood and had gone to school with the prime minister at St. Jean Brebeuf College.

"So far, so good," one RCMP constable said to another. "It's quieter than I would have expected."

Thousands lining streets in the harbor area greeted the royal visitors with polite applause as they drove by, but gave the Trudeaus, two cars behind, a lively cheer.

But the spirited response of those lining Belleville in front of the Legislative Buildings was saved for the prime minister and his wife, Margaret, as they went past, sitting.

The cavalcade was pursued by a youth on a unicycle and a pair riding 10-speed bicycles.

Grounded

Street Packed

By 7 p.m., Yates Street, which had been set aside for children, was littered with them. Many squatted in front of the curb. Some climbed trees, others sat on the hoods of cars and a few perched on top of ladders.

Behind the children, assorted parents adjusted the f-stops of their cameras, twisted the focus dials of their binoculars or fiddled with the sound on transistor radios.

From the corner of Cook and Yates and down to Blanshard, the crowd stood five deep. Cook was blocked on the north side of Yates as well as on the south side of Fort.

Trudeaus Smile

"That wasn't much," said one youngster after the cavalcade rolled briskly past.

The Trudeaus, smiling from a silver sports car, brought a rush of excitement from a covey of ladies. One woman rippled her friends with nervous laughter when she said: "I saw the queen, but I didn't see Philip."

One boy, wearing an American flag as a shirt, said he had no interest in seeing the Queen, and had come only because his parents had told him to.

"Because I'm an American."

Children generally were enthusiastic about their feelings. One girl said she hoped Trudeau wouldn't be there because she didn't like him any more after his marriage to a woman who is "too young."

Bicycle Escort

The last limousine, crowded with Mounties in scarlet, had an escort of its own as it scudded along Cook Street behind the Queen.

The long-haired youths on 10-speed bicycles, pedalled along gleefully in the wake of the RCMP escorts, flashed the peace sign. The thin crowd muttered dourly. The mounties in the car ahead grinned.

The crowd began gathering in force along Cook between Fort and Yates just a few minutes before the Queen's cavalcade arrived. Even then it was a pretty thin crowd.

People stood about two deep along the curb, with ragged gaps appearing frequently. They were predominantly older couples with young children in tow. There were few teen-agers or young adults.

Applause Light

Although the crowd surged forward into the gutters as the Queen's cavalcade drew near, applause was generally light. Most spectators headed right back to their cars as soon as she had passed.

Two flags appeared in the stretch from Fort to Yates, both of them maple leaf designs brandished by young children. One was a paper paste-up that looked like an elementary school project.

The crowd got a show before the Queen arrived as irreverent youths gunned their chopped motorcycles and muscle cars up and down the street.

A pick-up truck cruised from Fort to Yates and back again with a teen-age boy lounging in the back and lazily waving a parody of an official wave.

One long-hair in sunglasses who sauntered by at the back of the crowd as the queen passed observed: "Go away, man. The Queen is a bum trip."

But an eight-year-old girl thought otherwise. "She serves the country. She's the Queen of British Columbia."

An elderly man with a British accent thought the visit was "just splended," but he grumbled about what he considered a poor turnout.

In Centennial Square, Jack Clerkson, 21, thought the display was "charismatic." Scott Munro, 19, commented that the Queen had brought "the best turn-out of girls all year."

Only a few hundred people were scattered along Fort between Blanshard and Vancouver. A young mother was breast-feeding her baby in her car, waiting for the royal cavalcade.

Streets Closed

At the corner of Fort and Cook a crowd of about 600 closed off the two streets, and parted only reluctantly to let the occasional car or motorcycle through.

As the cavalcade drew near some people began to clap, others waved. An elderly man shouted "Welcome, welcome, welcome," to the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

"Get down, you bums," shouted an angry lady.

Shoving and pushing to see the Queen annoyed some spectators: "Some fool of a photographer had to stand in front of me just as the Queen went by, and all I saw was the back of the fool's head," said one woman.

'Fishing's Good'

The Prince waved back.

An older woman in a wheel chair, after catching a glimpse of the Queen, said:

"Well, I guess I've seen them all. "I saw Queen Victoria when I was 7, then Edward . . . he was some lad. I saw George V and VI and now the Queen. A lot of history has gone by."

Trudeau received some cheers and handclaps, but also this: "It will do him some good not to be in the limelight. It might help deflate his ego."

"We need a Queen just to show the politician that there is someone else on top," said another.

Royal Luggage

Minutes after the royal cavalcade pulled away, three DND trucks pulled up and began disgorging the royal baggage, more than 100 pieces of it.

The stuff was whisked aboard in trunks, boxes, suitcases and crates under the direction of Lieut. Victor Hays, 20 men from the 2nd Escort Squadron, three RCMP security officers and three drivers.

Then the royal party and entourage returned.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his bride walked aboard the Britannia to say goodnight to the Queen, whose smile was just beginning to fade as she stepped back on the gangplank.

"Home," said Trudeau.

Premier Bennett, loooking more robust than usual, was asked for impressions of the royal visit's first day.

"Beyond everyone's expectations," the premier enthused. "There were 300,000 people out in Vancouver, and 150,000 — half as many — here in Victoria."

Asked whether he had personally arranged for today's excellent weather and tomorrow's forecast of the same, the premier said he had not. And in reply to a query about the lack of demonstrative anti-monarchists, Bennett said. "There's no such thing."

She's Arrived! And Formality Gives Way to Smiles

The air of formality that had been building up around city hall began to disappear as soon as Queen Elizabeth strolled into Centennial Square.

At 7:23 p.m., someone in the crowd noted the royal standard had just risen atop the clock tower on city hall, and a little girl's voice cried: "She's arrived."

Appearing relaxed and smiling, next to beaming Mayor Courtney Haddock, the Queen was in no hurry to make her way to the platform. Ripples and bursts of cheers and applause broke out as she chatted at length to aldermen and others on the way.

The casual and unhurried attitude reached a peak at the end of her visit to the Square. Police cordons collapsed in several places, and the crowds pressed in on all sides of the cavalcade of cars, offering many people a view that looked almost too close for safety.

Prince Philip no sooner caught sight of a small group of war veterans than he marched directly over and asked: "Who are you?"

EACH CELEBRITY

Straining to see from behind behind yellow cordoning ropes, the few thousand people who crowded into Centennial Square registered the appearance of each new celebrity with clapping, cheering and oohing, depending o the personality.

While the Queen, Phince Philip and Princess Anne drew cheers and clapping as they came into the view of each group, Prime Minister Trudeau and his young bride brought on a long low "ooh."

Premier Bennett, who was making almost no effort to make his presence felt, managed a few characteristic waves and received hearty cheers in return.

Bennett, Trudeau and others waited a long time standing before their chairs on the platform before the Queen finished her conversations and arrived there.

STALWART VOICES

A shortened version of God Save the Queen and O Canada left some stalwart voices singing the Queen right through, ending several seconds after the cadet band had come to a stop.

An eerie background sound of symbols and religious chanting from the Tare Krishna following was clearly audible at centre square throughout the anthems, and during most of the visit.

People had begun to find viewing spots on the square as early as 3 p.m. along the cordons.

Many got a very close view of the royal family, but almost all the chatting was with the scouts, cadets, veterans and other organized groups on the other side of the ropes.

The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne, all shook hands with Mrs. Elva McDonald, soon to celebrate her 104 birthday. The Queen told her she was happy to see Mrs. McDonald looked so well.

Princess Anne said: "Congratulations on your birthday from all of us." Mrs. McDonald was so excited she could hardly get the words out: "I am so pleased to meet your Majesty."

Chuckles greeted Prince Philip's quip when recognizing Mrs. Arthur Laundy's IODE pin, he asked, "Here are the Daughters—where are the fathers?"

Mayor Courtney Haddock was so overwhelmed with the gift presented to him, by the Queen he promised to find a place for it in the city's "archives."

From the city of Victoria the Queen received an oil painting of Vancouver Island's Mount Victoria and a parchment scroll recording the dedication of a piece of waterfront property on which a mooring ring still exists from the windjammer days.

The casual approach of the royal family was best visible when they signed the city register. After Philip had recorded his name he turned to hand the pen to Princess Anne. She was in conversation with Ald. Robert Baird, and her father had to gesticulate with a full swing of his arm to get her attention. This drew applause from the crowds.

The only frantic activity came near the end of the 45-minute stay at Centennial Square, about 30 photographers and members of the press who were allowed to stray from their designated area, found themselves jammed in a corridor between rows of police and red-coated Highlanders.

They began to block the view of people whose only chance for a close view of the royal party was about to take place. They were booed and told to "get out of there" until they had backed into the street and around the Queen's limousine which was closely surrounded by more people.

POOR FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO PRESENT BEAN PLATE

The Queen didn't even get a sniff of wieners and beans Monday night as the poor peoples' banquet took place on schedule during her visit to Centennial Square.

The demonstration, organized by the Victoria Low Income Group, failed to deliver a plate to the Queen and present her with a bouquet.

The group's members passed around small paper cups containing the food while the religious Hare Krishna cult group seen recently on downtown city streets chanted non-stop beside the banquet on the grass of the square.

The group set up pails shortly before the Queen was due to arrive at the square.

"We are going to try to present the Queen with these wieners and beans and a bouquet of ribbon flowers made by a woman in this city, group leader Walter Olszewski told reporters.

"If we don't, we'll disperse quietly and mail her the flowers."

After the Queen went past, she gave them a long look as her car pulled away.

"She'll recognize them—if she ever sees them," Miss Pilon said.

A special platter of wieners and beans had been prepared for the Queen. Some people in the crowd accepted the food.

Olszewski said about 30 members of the group showed up, including representatives from Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Vancouver.

He Might Just Wait . . . For a Second Look

It is 30 minutes before the Queen was due to arrive at City Hall.

His name is George East and "if I make the next several weeks I'll be 79."

Will he wait?

"I might, just to see how she's aging. On the other hand, I might just catch the bus back home."

He keeps up a pretence of nonchalance, undermined by the newspaper clippings he brings out from his pocket — all on the royal visit. With pride he shows his centennial pioneer medal.

Still he lingers. He reminisces, remembering the times he's seen the Queen's parents and grandparents.

Back in history again, "Did you know that I was baptized by Lester Pearson's father — he was a Methodist minister."

Why are they there?

* * *

Dave Weigand is blunt: "We're just curious. We want to see what the British are spending a million pounds a year on."

Cathie Duncan agrees: "We've seen her picture on the school wall — we salute the flag — we want to see what it's all about."

Stan Denniston gives his views: "The monarchy is a holdover — you know — from the old feudal times. It doesn't mean a thing. It doesn't make us any more Canadian."

Lin Biggs pauses a moment, then says, "I guess she's a symbol — or something."

The police escorts drive by. The students stop talking. In spite of their words their eyes, like everyone else's, are on the royal car.

The old man, too, has stayed.

After they've passed, he comes over, grabs an arm.

Old School Friends Meet

Maurice Langelier, formerly of Montreal, walked from his home at 10 Douglas Street to the CPR docks to see the Queen, and hopefully to shake hands with his old school friend, Pierre Trudeau.

The two-hour wait was worth it.

He not only shook hands but had a brief chat with the prime minister as Trudeau and his wife followed the Royal party back to the Britannia.

SAME SCHOOL

Langelier, whose family lived four houses away from the Trudeaus, went to the same kindergarten as Trudeau. The boys went through school together at Le College Jean de Brebeuf in Outremont.

Langelier remembers Trudeau as "very sporty, very intellectual, quiet but well respected." He played hockey and lacrosse.

In the conversation at the dock the Prime Minister asked Langelier how long he had been living here (a year and a half) and said "I haven't seen you since college."

As a Canadian from Quebec Langelier believes that "the monarchy should be kept as a symbol, even though the Queen has nothing to do with the administration of the country."

Kent State Coverage Wins Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Pulitzer prizes have been awarded for coverage of the Kent State University campus tragedy in which Ohio National Guard troops killed four students and wounded nine others a year ago today.

The staff of the Akron, Ohio, Beacon Journal won the general local reporting award Monday for its work in piecing together the story of the shootings under deadline pressure.

In the arts, the 1971 prize for drama went to Paul Zindel's The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds—the second year in a row an off-Broadway play won the award.

For the first time since 1964 no fiction prize was awarded.

The prize for national reporting went to Lucinda Franks, 24, and Thomas Powers, 30, of United Press International for their background exploration of Diana Oughton, 28, killed in the explosion of a bomb factory in a Greenwich Village townhouse in New York.

The prize for public service by a newspaper went to the Winston-Salem, N.C., Journal and Sentinel for their coverage of environmental problems including a successful fight against a proposed strip mining operation that would have blighted the beauty of northwestern North Carolina.

The prize for international reporting went to Jimmie Lee Hoagland, 31, of the Washington Post for reporting on South Africa's apartheid system.

William Jones, 31, of the Chicago Tribune, won the prize for special local reporting for an investigative series that exposed payoffs to police in the private ambulance industry.

Paul Conrad was at work at the Los Angeles Times when he learned he had won his second Pulitzer Prize in seven years for cartooning. He first won in 1964 while working for the Denver Post.

Conrad, 47, submitted 10 cartoons, one a particularly biting comment on the My Lai massacre.
